Through the Years

Seventy-five years of greatness and fame,
Seventy-five years of building a name,
Seventy-five years of memories so clear,
Seventy-five years ago I was founded right here.

I was at first
Just a few rooms,
But before very long
I began to loom
To new heights—
To new fortunes—
To reputations so great
That youngsters from everywhere
Stand, eager at my gates.

I have seen in my times
Great swarms of youths
Rush through my corridors
Appearing uncouth.

I have seen in my times
Many pass through my portals
To emerge in short order
New, cultured mortals.

I have seen in my times
Great wars of hate
That have sent my loved children
To a dark, dreary fate.

I have seen in the progress
The making of men,
Citizens of tomorrow,
For a peaceful world again.

Yes, seventy-five years of greatness and fame,
Seventy-five years of building a name,
Seventy-five years of memories so clear,
For seventy-five years has Lake View stood here.

As they pass through these doors and over these stairs day after day, students might stop to reflect a few seconds on the meaning of our colored window and of the words which B. Frank Brown, to whom the window is dedicated, loved so well—"Let me live in my house by the side of the road and be a friend to man. . ."

OUR TOWN

Memories of days long past were brought to mind recently after the Metropolitan section of THE TRIBUNE printed a story about Lake View High school's 75th anniversary. S. G. Taylor of the Union League club remembered a pleasant occurrence of 1877.

Miss Mead

His sister-in-law, Ella Mead, "a handsome young lady," was graduated from Lake View that year. Commencement day she received a beautiful bouquet of flowers with a card enclosed "from the Class of 1876." She was touched and pleased that the entire class of the year before should remember her.

When her friends began to tease her she realized that the class of 1876 consisted of one person, Benjamin F. McConnell, the school's first graduate.

The marriage of Ella Mead and McConnell took place several years later. They lived happily in the Lake View neighborhood until 1899 when they moved to St. Joseph, Mich. McConnell went into the manufacturing business there and they lived the rest of their lives prosperously. The couple's youngest daughter, Miss Madeline McConnell, is director of nurses at St. Luke's hospital.

FOREWORD

"We're loyal to you, old Lake View!"

She heard them, hundreds of young voices vibrant with the romance of living, the longing of youth for the fray. Most of those singers saw visions of themselves as victors always.

"We'll know no defeat, no never" . . . Each was a hero to himself.

And yet again they sang:

"We're loyal to you, old Lake View!"

In a quiet corner, she heard, yet heard not; her thoughts were flitting. Ravenswood was again six houses in the woods, with a one-room school. Now this, grown too small, takes as annex the church "parlor." A few years more, and a four-room school is built, and people are already talking of a high school.

So "Lake View" comes upon the map, with a faculty of one.

"All, all are gone, the old familiar faces" of boys and girls, a procession [seventy-five] years long. Teachers only abide, linking one generation to the next. Strange, that affection for the work that makes it dearer than leisure or preferment!

"For loyalty is you, Lake View!"

Through the Years

Seventy-five years ago Lake View High School was raised out of the heart of a prairie wilderness from materials consisting mainly of the faith, hope, and courage of early pioneers, who had little else with which to build. The year 1872 found the country struggling in the throes of a panic; general apathy reigned; and the calls for new enterprises were growing more feeble every day.

As the clouds and storms of depression settled over the land, few people could hold onto dreams and aspirations any longer, and fewer still were they who managed to bring their dreams into being. One such rare man of action and imagination was William P. Jones, scholar, prophet, poet, and educator.

In 1869 Mr. Jones came to Lake View inspired with the thought that a fine community could be built out of the little town huddled on the open prairie against the driving winds and blinding snow of winter, and in summer, the unrelenting rays of a bright sun. He believed that the indomitable pioneers braving these hardships would soon be demanding schools for their children so that they could be educated into better lives than those of lonely backwoodsmen. Still, with foresight and wisdom, he also realized that no single tiny village could raise and maintain an adequate high school. Determined that the urgent need for schools throughout the state, as well as in his own vicinity, be met, he labored unceasingly until he had created a public opinion which enabled him to induce the legislature of 1872 to pass a law authorizing the establishment of township high schools. Under this law funds for schools could be collected from an entire section rather than one small town.

The first community to take advantage of the law was Lake View which almost immediately presented a petition for such a high school to the township treasurer. The petition was granted, and on August 3, 1873, the townspeople were called together so that they might select a site, and authorize the trustees to issue bonds to the amount of fifteen thousand dollars to provide for the construction of a building. Although everyone agreed on the latter half of the proposition, a lively debate ensued as to where the school should be located, because a number of sites had been mentioned. It was the Graceland Cemetery Company that settled the controversy by offering a lot at the corner of Graceland (now Irving Park Boulevard) and Ashland Avenues, free of charge, provided a building costing not less than fifteen thousand dollars be erected within two years. An election was then held, and of the four sites voted upon, the gift site received one hundred thirteen votes against fifty-five for the other three combined.

Eager to begin construction before the bitter cold should set in, the willing laborers commenced work on the first day of September, under the direction of S. M. Randolph, the architect, and Jens Olsen, the contractor.

Completed the next spring at a final cost of sixteen thousand dollars, the building was pronounced a beautiful structure and a model of its kind. The white two-story frame schoolhouse was nestled in the midst of several large willow trees, and was surrounded by a wide green lawn, which in turn was encircled by a low picket fence. On the first floor was a library, a laboratory, and four classrooms, while the second was merely one large room with a platform at one end, serving as a combination assembly hall and cloakroom. The janitor, who from 1874 to 1914 was Robert Wilson, and his family resided in an apartment in the basement; and it has been said that the delightful aroma of cooking dinners floating up to the students during school hours was one of the greatest distractions from study.

The school was dedicated on April 29, 1874, against the background of a rural township far outside the city limits of Chicago, and few of the onlookers even dreamed that some day the little building would be one of the oldest and best-known institutions in that great metropolis.

Through the Years

On the morning of May the fourth an excited group of seventy-three students, who had previously taken an entrance examination, assembled for the first classes. Out of these, only eight were undertaking high school studies, the remaining sixty-five all being enrolled in a two-months preparatory course. The entire faculty consisted of Augustus F. Nightingale, appointed by the trustees as the principal, and also serving as sole instructor.

His students faced a life at home and in school, which was very different, and in many ways more difficult, than the comfortable existence familiar to most Lake Viewites of today. When the school was erected, there was scarcely a house within a mile. Several toll gates could be found between Fullerton Avenue and the northern limits of the township. The sole means of transportation in any direction was an old dummy car which rattled along from Diversey Street to the Graceland Cemetery at what is now known as Clark Street. From there to the school ran a three-planked boardwalk over which the students trudged daily, unless they chose to walk the long distance between home and school by way of the open prairie. Along this untrailed route, they could gather armfuls of sweet-smelling violets and delicately-colored shooting stars, or lunch on wild strawberries and hazel nuts as they went. In the soft warm days of spring and autumn classes were often held outside under the great old trees surrounding the school, though, during the long hard months of winter, even the roaring furnace and heavy protecting walls seemed a poor fortress against the biting unceasing wind that swept across the countryside.

Throughout the early years of the school each morning began with an assembly. This consisted of a reading from the Bible, the singing of a hymn, and the recitation of the Lord's Prayer. Though many races and forms of belief were represented in the student body, there was never, during all the time this custom persisted, a murmur of complaint from any parent or pupil.

At the close of the exercises the principal would sometimes speak on the proper characteristics of a worthy life, the qualities of true citizenship, and the importance of college and university training. His words and influence left a definite mark on the students as evidenced in their work, which soon gave Lake View High School the highest scholarship rank in the State.

The first time this superiority was acknowledged was in February of 1876, when a request came from the Superintendent of Schools of Illinois that a special examination be given the students. The completed papers were to be sent, uncorrected to the state authorities, who then would forward them to the International Exposition which was held in Philadelphia that year. Although both students and teachers were wearied from the recent mid-term examinations, they all exerted themselves in an effort to bring honor to their school.

Toward the end of February Dr. Nightingale was notified by the chairman of the Educational Committee that Lake View had received the highest possible award, a diploma (certificate) for its distinguished work, so outstanding that it ranked above all the school work submitted by students throughout the world.

At the close of the Exposition an additional honor came in the form of a letter from the president of the French Educational Commission which requested that Dr. Nightingale send some selected papers so that excerpts from them could be published in the report to the French government. During this period Lake View received ninety per cent of the awards given by the State for scholastic achievement,—more than sixty-five diplomas and over four hundred dollars in money, in the form of "premiums." One year the school received fourteen out of the fifteen premiums offered.

The reason for this remarkable achievement lay to a great extent in the marking system. A youthful pride can accomplish almost anything, and Dr. Nightingale capitalized on this bit of wisdom by inaugurating the practice of regularly making public the grades of every student. Four times during the semester the whole school assembled in the auditorium, and the marks of each pupil, starting with the lowest and ending with the highest, were loudly and clearly read from the platform. Needless to say, failures were almost unheard of, and grades were carried out to fractions to insure absolute fairness.

Final examination papers were sent in a sealed envelope by the State authorities. The principal opened it in the sight of pupils and teachers; and immediately, the students began the test, working under an honor system which required them to sign a pledge that they had neither given nor received information. After the papers had been carefully graded, the awards were given. The girl receiving the highest marks received the gold Kerfoot medal worth twenty dollars. The boys had their choice of a gold Saint Andrew's Cross or books. There was also an award for those outstanding in botany and mathematics.

Benjamin Franklin McConnell, sole graduate in 1876, was the first alumnus. Two years later Ella Mead, a very beautiful young girl, who was one of the eight graduates of the class of 1878, became Benjamin's bride—and the first class bride of Lake View.

Graduation Day was a momentous event requiring weeks of preparation and planning. For several days before the ceremony the boys, after wheedling permission from Dr. Nightingale, would take every wagon and buggy available, and drive merrily into the nearby woods (Forest Preserves) where they gathered spruce, evergreen, hemlock, and arbor vitae to decorate the halls and auditorium. The fragrant boughs were deposited in the basement, and there the students fairly flew whenever a moment could be spared, the boys cutting the branches and the girls weaving wreaths or sewing arbor vitae on the cardboard letters which were to fashion the school motto, "Ad astra per aspera."

The week before graduation the Seniors were given a gala party by the Juniors. Unlike our proms, it consisted of games and dancing, the games proving so hilarious that dancing was always forgotten.

Commencement night found almost the whole town thronging into the auditorium to admire the nervous graduates—the girls in starched white dresses and the boys in high collars, and always tight new shoes. Dresses and collars wilted visibly as the students awaited their turn to speak, for each one was required to give a thesis of a thousand words. In addition to these, the two ranking students had to present the valedictorian and salutatorian addresses. Between 1876 and 1884 there were sixty-seven graduates—forty-one girls and twenty-six boys, of whom, about forty per cent entered college. The remaining sixty per cent took courses in manual training and bookkeeping which were offered even in those early days.

The enrollment gradually began to increase as did the faculty. Former students began to return as teachers—Miss Flora B. Andrews of the class of 1877 became secretary to the principal and an instructor in mathematics, while Miss Emma Johnson came back to teach art. Miss Eleanor Larrison was elected to teach English and history. During this period members of the faculty also included Miss Clara Clemm, Miss Helmuth, and Mr. Martin Anderson. Laura C. Hills, class of 1878, joined the faculty as a teacher of French in 1882. At the same time James H. Norton took charge of the Science Department, and a few years later romance entered Lake View, for Miss Hills became Mrs. James Norton. It was around this time that one of Lake View's "immortals," Miss Mary T. Cochrane, arrived on the scene. She was a combination assistant-principal and teacher of English. Although she is remembered for many outstanding accomplishments, the mention of her name often brings to mind one amusing, yet almost tragic, incident. It occurred during the winter of 1883, the most severe in the history of the school. That the pupils had to struggle through the biting cold and freezing wind was bad enough, but when the dummy car was abruptly removed, it became necessary to take drastic measures to provide some means of transportation, since three-fourths of the faculty and student body lived too far away to walk to and from school.

Through the Years

At first an old bus was pressed into service, but that had severe drawbacks; daily the driver would discover that some part of the machine was about to give away, and excusing himself politely, he would start out along the route for help, a little too eagerly to be believed. An hour or so later he would sway gently toward the bus, hammer in hand, and tinker abstractedly with the engine. Meanwhile, his passengers had been frozen literally and figuratively into silence.

Finally, the indomitable Miss Cochrane came to the rescue. Using all her ingenuity and wit, she secured from a friendly neighbor the use of his sled, and each student paid the fee of five dollars in advance for the rest of the winter. Packed three deep in the hay-filled bobsled, the students had many a jolly time as they rode to and from school, but the bitter wind that blew across the prairie often robbed the trip of all its pleasure, for it usually resulted in frozen fingers, ears and noses. The sleigh made only two trips, one in the morning and again in the afternoon. If one missed the sled—!!

Yes, cruel hardships of nature were abundant then, but somehow the happy-go-lucky spirit of youth managed to prevail. In the calendars of Lake Viewites there was no more momentous, wonderful day than April first. On this solemn date everyone hied his way to school filled with trepidation; fearing, yet looking forward to, the pranks that were certain to be played upon him. There was no limit to the reigning impishness, and no teacher or pupil was overlooked. On one occasion Dr. Nightingale, whose head was as bald as the well-known billiard ball, was presented with a giant bottle of "Hair Restorer." At another time, a group of boisterous students found Miss Cochrane sitting in a rocking chair. With a whoop they seized the chair, Miss Cochrane in it, and lifting it to their shoulders marched victoriously through the halls and out onto the campus. Here they set the chair with its flustered occupant in the back of a wagon; then, climbing in themselves, they took her for a hilarious ride over grassy meadows to the north—a ride which that teacher probably never forgot.

On another April Fool's Day the boys suddenly caught up Dr. Nightingale as he was walking down the hall and carried him outside the school. The weather had been freakish that year and great drifts of snow lay all about. Into one of these huge drifts the boys dumped him head foremost. A sham battle followed in which the snowballs flew thick and fast. After a moment or two, Doctor Nightingale called, "That's all, boys," brushed the snow from his coat, and followed by the laughing students, entered the building. Some fifteen minutes later he began a frantic search through his pockets saying quietly, "Boys, I am not averse to fun; but, in the scuffle, I have lost my glasses. Go out and look for them, and don't come back without them. Melt the snow if necessary." The boys undertook the task, a snowy counterpart to finding a needle in a haystack—and after a diligent search returned triumphant.

Friday, March 13, 1885, is an unforgettable day in Lake View's history. Professor Nightingale, seated at dinner in his home on Diversey Street, was startled by the loud clanging of fire gongs. Running to the door, he shouted, "Where's the fire?" to the men on the apparatus drawn by two galloping nags. He was dismayed and alarmed at the reply, "The High School!" and ordered, "Take me along!" Because of the sparse settlement of the district the fire was easily discernible in all directions, and the populace had already gathered to watch the first township high school in the state go up in flames by the time the old fire engine arrived.

Most of the first-floor furniture and science apparatus had been rescued, when suddenly a cry went up from the throng. A man was seen to dash recklessly into the flames. After a few tense minutes, he staggered out carrying on his shoulders a gruesome burden—a human skeleton! The crowd, composed mainly of students who had been late in leaving school, shuddered, seeing in the charred bones all that remained of a school chum. Gasps gave way to relieved smiles, however, when closer inspection revealed that this skeleton was only "Johnny," an expensive specimen from the science laboratory, whose bones they had often counted as part of their classwork. When the sun rose the next morning, its rays fell on a heap of ashes and smouldering embers in the center of a large prairie. Delightful memories were all that remained of the proud young high school.

The school convened as usual the following Monday, but met at the little Evanston Avenue, now Broadway Chapel, which had opened its doors to the students. In the auditorium of the chapel were four long rows of tables which consisted of pine boards placed on wooden horses. These were the desks. Back of the platform which extended across the front of the auditorium were two rooms divided into smaller recitation rooms by heavy curtains. This proved most confusing while recitations were going on.

As there were no drinking facilities, two pails of water were placed upon chairs on either side of the front vestibule; the one on the right for the girls, and that on the left for the boys.

The graduation class of 1885 was forced to find less crowded quarters for its exercises, and the Evangelical Lutheran Church on School Street came to the rescue with the offer of its auditorium. This Church, although large, was filled to capacity. The student body was seated in the gallery, and lest their voices should not carry, the music teacher called in a few alumni. The combined voices made the auditorium resound to the melodies of "Italia Beloved" and the "Anvil Chorus." There were ten graduates in this class.

Fully realizing the value of a high school, the community floated a bond issue for twenty-five thousand dollars, which sum, when added to the insurance from the old building, made possible the construction of a new building, twice as large as the old, and more modern. Built at a cost of forty-five thousand dollars, it had accommodations for two hundred and fifty students.

The grounds surrounding the new building were attractively terraced. A bell weighing seventeen hundred pounds, was placed in the tower; its warning at eight-thirty, and again at nine, could be heard as far as the toll gate at Clark and Addison Streets.

School work was begun in the new building in March, 1886, and on May 28 a thousand citizens were crowded into the auditorium to celebrate the opening of the school.

Life progressed at a rapid pace for the next five years. The little town of Lake View suddenly began to expand, and in 1889 it was incorporated into the City of Chicago; as a result its school became a member of the Chicago School System. Students accepted the change with comparative indifference; life was too full of more important things, such as the election of Benjamin Harrison to the presidency. A number of pupils "cut" the afternoon school session in order to celebrate the event with a gay party at one of the boy's homes. Of course, they paid the usual consequences at school the next morning, but there was not a one of them that did not agree it was worth it.

Neither did anyone ever forget that day in the Latin Class when an irritated teacher told Hod Chase, the class scamp, to hold his tongue, which he promptly did —between his forefinger and thumb. The accustomed teacher cheerfully said, "That's fine, Hod," and continued the lesson while the girls took refuge behind their Virgils, and Hod stubbornly kept hold of his tongue. How could any of those students forget the sight of Miss Lord leading the daily hymn, her bustle keeping accurate, lively time to the music; or the Girls' Shinny Club, twenty-five years ahead of its time; or finally, Madame Appleby appearing Monday morning at the assembly room door to demand with a rapid, excited accent that she "vanted to know vhy her French Class had not been sent down?" No, those wonderful happy days of growth and laughter form a never-to-be forgotten era of Lake View history.

Through the Years

During that time Dr. Nightingale saw the little country school he had founded grow to a great bustling high school. He, himself, with his wife, Fanny Chase Nightingale, who taught music at the school, had become almost an intrinsic part of Lake View, and it was with a deep sense of loss and regret that students and faculty bade them good-bye in 1890, when the remarkable principal left to become Superintendent of Chicago Schools.

To fill the vacancy thus caused, Mr. Charles W. French was appointed. Mr. French, however, left Lake View the following year to serve as principal of the Hyde Park High School. He was succeeded by a Lake View teacher, Mr. James H. Norton.

It is seldom that a man becomes a high school principal in his twenties; there are few men who are worthy of this honor. Mr. Norton was one of the few. To his students Mr. Norton was a big brother—the hero of the girls, and companionable pal of the boys. His sincerity and nobility of character were so contagious that the pupils were ashamed not to do their best for him. He had a spontaneous interest in their clubs, their teams, their studies; but, primarily, in the students themselves. He was so patient and gentle that they trusted him implicitly, and were never loath to go to him with their troubles. "Those whom the gods love die young" seems a true prophecy in the case of Mr. Norton; for, in 1900, when he was on his way to the Paris Exposition to install a large exhibit from Lake View, he suddenly became very ill, and died before ever reaching his destination.

In the Conference Room, originally the office, you can find two stained glass windows, one of which is dedicated to Mr. Norton. It portrays an armed Roman soldier with a young boy. The soldier's sword is drawn; his left hand points to heaven symbolizing his high ideals, his determination, and his love of youth.

During the nine years that Mr. Norton was in office many changes took place, not only in the school, but over the country. It was the "Speed Era," and the "Age of Flaming Youth," the last contribution of a hectic, historic century.

In school life, bicycles had become an all-consuming vogue. The boy without a bicycle might have been the boy without a country for all the girls cared. A young speed demon who could push his tandem along at fifteen miles an hour could be king —at least in the heart of the blushing damsel on the front seat.

Lake View was infested with cyclists of all descriptions. Rotund young ladies, who could barely be sustained by their fragile vehicles, always presented a humorous spectacle especially to their slimmer sister pedalists. Diminutive males had a tough time of it, for that was before the day of the twenty-six inch wheel. Tall fellows had the advantage all the way round.

The "Horseless Carriage" was as yet held together with safety pins; men still wore removable cuffs and striped trousers; the curfew rang at nine o'clock, and homework was abundant. "Wotta life!"

There were more serious aspects to the situation, however. Lake View continued to grow, overflowing the building that people had considered "extravagantly" large. In 1898 a large four-story addition was erected at the north end. It is now the central portion of the school. As the enrollment grew, so did the faculty. Mr. Pepoon, Mr. Taylor, and Mrs. Trowbridge, who had graduated in 1889, came to teach the swelling student body. Miss Mary Isabel Reynolds, a former student, returned as a secretary, advanced to become a teacher of English, and later assistant-principal. She served under four principals, each of whom felt, "I couldn't run the shop without her." She remained until 1929 when she was assigned a school of her own.

Mr. Benjamin F. Buck, successor to the principalship upon Mr. Norton's death, soon revealed the caliber of his ability by attaining the same warm place in the affection of Lake View. During the twelve years he was here, his achievements won him such great renown that in 1912 he was chosen the first principal of the new high school to the north—Senn.

Through the Years

If Lake View had a hall of fame, Mr. Brown would occupy a prominent niche. It was he that made the name of Lake View known from coast to coast. His magnetic personality endeared him to the students and faculty alike. He played an important part in the formation of the students' character; for, under his influence, the observance of the motto, "PLAY FAIR—FAIR PLAY" was woven into their lives. He constantly strove to improve the school. Under his guidance several large additions were annexed to the school; beautiful murals, stained glass panels, and paintings appeared; the first baby "LAKE re VIEW" was published; and the local Lake View Honor Society was founded. The R.O.T.C. was organized under the able direction of Sergeant Lee, who began an illustrious career that ultimately gave Lake View one of the finest corps in the United States. The Lake View Commission appeared on the scene, and that most treasured of Lake View traditions, "Cotton" or "Gingham" Day, was first originated.

The school drew students from all over the city forcing the enrollment up by leaps and bounds, until it reached about 3,500. Members of the faculty numbered more than one hundred, and a number of new courses were added.

In 1916 the old two-story building, which stood on the corner of Ashland and Irving Park, was razed. A new four-story section, containing the present assembly hall, was constructed. At this same time there was added to the north end another large section which the boys' gymnasium now occupies. This still could not accommodate all the pupils, and, in February of 1919, the first of Lake View's branches, Greeley, which had been discontinued as a grammar school, was opened.

The First World War occurred at this time, and students quickly responded to the call with bonds. However, neither wars nor crowded conditions seemed to be able to slow down the influx of students, which soon required the opening of two more branches, Hamilton, and Ravenswood.

Part of this wonderful growth was due, of course, to the energetic spirit of the times, but much of it came through the man at the school's head. Mr. B. Frank Brown had that rare gift—an understanding heart. He helped the students to know not only themselves, but each other as well. His favorite maxim, "Let me live in my house by the side of the road, and be a friend to man," expresses that feeling of kindliness which still lives in the heart of the school, even though his untimely death in 1924 terminated his brilliant career.

Mr. Perrine followed him, remaining at the helm of Lake View from 1924 to 1930, during a hectic era when an unhappy world watched the turbulent rise and fall of money values. A capable executive, he encouraged high standards in all the many phases of worthwhile school activities. While he was principal the Parent-Teacher Association was established, and the course book replaced the old report card. It was then, also, that one of the few sad episodes in Lake View history took place. From the time of the school's beginning one of its greatest sources of pleasure and beauty was the quiet serene loveliness of several fine old willow trees surrounding it. In 1929, when Ashland Avenue was widened, all of these trees had to be ruthlessly dragged from the ground as obstructions in the path of Progress. So it was that one more delightful part of early Lake View was forced to become just a sweet memory.

At the end of five years Mr. Perrine was transferred to Medill High School, and was followed in office by the man whose quiet dignity is still fresh in many memories, Mr. Olice Winter. Mr. Winter inaugurated his regime when scarcely a day passed that the papers did not relate the deaths of one or more business men through open office windows; bread lines stretched endlessly; and on practically every door hung the depressing sign, "NO HELP WANTED."

Through the Years

Still the flamboyant gay spirit of youth persisted. There was a Senior Drama; until 1936 each year saw the production of some well-known opera or operetta under the direction of Mrs. Dora Smith; and old annuals are filled with pages containing exciting notes of Gilbert and Sullivan productions, Romberg's "My Maryland," and Rostand's "Cyrano de Bergerac." There was a thriving Boys' Glee Club, a Tennis Club, and, spasmodically, a course in fencing.

Enrollment reached its peak of well over 4,800. Lake View was graduating mid-year classes of three hundred or more, and June classes that neared the six hundred mark. For a short time, another branch, Audubon, was opened. In an effort to keep personality important under the burden of such large numbers, the Personnel Department was organized, by which child, home, and school were brought closer together. Only complete co-operation kept the school running on an even keel during those troubled days, and no man deserves greater tribute for having this spirit of loyalty than Mr. G. Dana Henderson, assistant-principal from 1929 to 1946. Quiet, yet firm, solicitous, yet strict, he had the admiration and respect of teachers and students alike. One of the finest figures in our school's history, Mr. Henderson, deserves an honored place in the annals of Lake View's memory.

In 1939 the apartment buildings at the south end of the school were torn down, and another large addition was erected. This contained the girls' gymnasiums and a modern, airy cafeteria. The latter, situated in the basement, will be remembered with pleasure by the students who used to trudge wearily to the fourth floor for lunch.

Soon after these improvements were made, the country entered into another World War. Once more, students responded to the nation-wide appeal for aid, selling stamps and bonds until enough money was raised to pay for an airplane to be used in hospital work. A bronze plaque representing the flag being raised over Iwo Jima stands near the office in commemoration of this achievement.

It was largely through Mr. Winter that such interest in school activities was kept up so constantly. He took an active part in student government, athletics, and scholarship. A prominent figure in the field of education, his services were sought by youth clubs and school organizations throughout the city. He loved all boys and girls, and had implicit faith in the ability of young people to fashion a better world in which to live. It was this philosophy that led him to take up the motto "Today We Train, For We Must Have Lasting Peace" during the recent war. His death in March, 1948, was mourned by young people all over Chicago, but most especially by the students of Lake View, who became better individuals under the influence of his quiet life.

To Mr. I. P. Daniel, our assistant-principal, we owe a debt of gratitude, for it was he that guided us through the sad, unsettled month that followed. On May 3, 1948, we welcomed our present principal, Mr. J. Trimble Boyd. An active and successful educator in the Chicago School System for thirty-two years, he is certain to carry on the splendid tradition of Lake View's continued improvement handed down from principal to principal throughout our history. Already he has instituted several changes calculated to better the school and help the student. Outstanding among these are, of course, the National Honor Society which he inaugurated here in the fall of 1948, and the new form of student government. May you have continued success and many happy years at Lake View, Mr. Boyd!

EPILOGUE

"After [seventy-five] years the living itself becomes extinct. Time changes even the most permanent of our once 'remaining fixtures.' Our once familiar scenes become obtuse and forgotten. Yet as long as the faintest of memories persist in being the idea of our once conceivable plans is alive and needs only encouragement to be born again."

We have traced lightly over many of these memories, paced not so much by minutes, hours, or years, as by graduation classes come and gone; by proms, Cadet Hops, and Music Festivals; and by the echo of young laughter permeating the halls, changing an empty building into a living tabernacle dedicated to youth and democracy. The past joins hands with the present, and together they face the future unafraid, confident that knowledge pressed forward by courageous young hearts can raise a hectic world out of chaos—as it has always done through the years.

The preceding history was compiled from the records of Dr. A. F. Nightingale; from excerpts from letters; from the history published on the fiftieth anniversary; from the sixty-fifth and seventieth anniversary annuals; from the "Lamp"; from the files of the Hild Library; and a few other miscellaneous sources.

Certain portions of the history were quoted directly from the original writings. The "Forward" was written on the occasion of the school's fiftieth anniversary by Lydia Jones Trowbridge, a graduate and teacher at Lake View for many years, and whose father was one of the founders of the school. Mrs. Trowbridge, after a lifetime of service, passed away in the spring of 1948.

Also, the first paragraph of the Epilogue has been reprinted from the 1944 edition of the "Red and White."

It is an inspiring event to be observing the Seventy-fifth Anniversary of a high school. It is especially inspiring to realize the sense of idealism and seriousness of purpose that moves you, the students of that high school, to disregard numerous attractive but less consequential demands of the day and make the educational story of your school the theme of your commemorative Yearbook.

Seventy-five years is a long time. In this instance, it marks the closing quarter of one century and the opening half of another century. It has spanned many changes in our national life, such as the movement from rural to urban communities, our victory over hazards like economic depressions and world wars and our development of technological discoveries that have vastly enriched our ways of living. Your high school, throughout its long life, has not only reflected these changes, but has also interpreted them to generations of our citizens.

You, who as students now carry the banner of Lake View, have deep civic and scholastic responsibilities to meet. It is for you so to live and learn that your example will honor the thousands who have preceded you, and inspire the thousands who will follow you, through your school's revered halls. May you prosper and succeed in this worthy endeavor.

Mrs. B. Traynor

President, Chicago Board of Education

It is a pleasure indeed to be privileged to greet you through the pages of your yearbook, and I am grateful for the invitation which has made this little visit possible.

As you come to the end of your high school experiences and prepare to go forth into new fields, I know of the satisfaction that is yours in reflecting upon the accomplishments of these past happy years. To have earned high school graduation is truly an achievement and upon it all of you deserve much credit. What you have done and what you have accomplished in your high school years has built a firm foundation for the new life that is ahead in which you will be called upon to apply the knowledge and the skill which you have acquired. Such application will prove even more satisfying and a further stimulus toward still greater gains.

You have made plans and outlined objectives for the years ahead. Toward the accomplishment of these the felicitations of those with whom you have worked go with you. For happiness and success we express our very best wishes.

Faithfully yours

Edward C. Hunt

Superintendent, Chicago Public Schools

Schools over the years tend to build a tradition. This tradition may be one of which all those who enter will remain proud for all their days, or it may be one which in later years could well be forgotten.

The tradition which has grown up and has centered itself around Lake View is one that brings a sense of pride to all of those whose attachment is directed toward this school.

As students who attend this school from year to year become imbued with the spirit of those who have gone before, those among them who are honest will seek in every way to so conduct themselves that this tradition will become nobler and grander as the years go by. It will be with a keen sense of satisfaction and pride that each graduate will look upon those illustrious names that have added to the spirit of Lake View, and the day will come when those in attendance will say to themselves in their daily conduct, "This is Lake View," and that little statement will guide them aright.

Through the Years

A sturdy brick building,
Long corridors,
Rows of large lockers,
Long-trodden floors.
A building majestic,
Unique in its way,
A building of memories—
That's Lake View today.

Now let us go back quite a long time ago
When Ravenswood Village started to grow—
When Lake View began.

The first graduating class was next to none.
It was not very large, just consisting of one—
When Lake View began.

But the enrollment increased year by year
Until finally four hundred was average here—
When Lake View began to grow.

Soon was offered a variety of courses;
Knowledge was gained from numerous sources—
When Lake View was growing up.

Now as she stands a symbol of youth
We see an institution of honor and truth.
Lake View has grown up to be
A sturdy brick building,
With long corridors,
Rows of large lockers,
Long-trodden floors.
A building majestic,
Unique in its way,
A building of memories—
That's Lake View today.

THE School

75th ANNIVERSARY

As the girl hurried along, her heels made an incongruous, little clatter against the floor, shattering silence that hung over wide corridors and empty classrooms. She paused a second at the door, sensing a suspended, breathless life all about her. Unvoiced sounds pressed against her ears—speeches of teachers rising above the noise of restless youth, martial music of an invisible band, daintier strains of an unseen orchestra, rapid clicking of typewriter keys, with a companion buzz of efficiency emitting from the dim office. The girl wondered slightly at these noises, not quite understanding that they were only memory's reminder of many well-known, well-loved things she seldom noticed. Glancing up at the clock, she watched the minute hand jump down one more space and dimly realized that another link had been added onto a chain seventy-five years long. Then she pushed open the door, went down the stone steps, and started toward home. But once or twice she stopped to look back at the quiet building rearing its proud towers against a darkening sky.

Lake View Hymn

All hail to thee, dear Alma Mater
To thee our voices rise in praise;
To thee whose guiding light has led us
Through scores of bright and happy days.
Our hymn shall ever tell the story
Of honor fair and beauty true,
Of precepts high that thou hast taught us;
All hail to thee, Lake View.

Though far our wand'ring paths may lead us,
Or life's work call to distant clime,
To thee our thoughts shall ever carry
The love undimmed by space or time;
For thou hast fostered every striving,
To thee we owe whate'er we do.
So shall thy loyal sons and daughters
Sing hail, all hail, Lake View.

This year, the most significant of the 75 years of the glorious history of Lake View High School, we are mindful that the first essential for any high school is a sense of togetherness; the experience of working cooperatively for a great purpose; administrators, faculty, parents, and students. Each has a definite role to play in assuming that our high school shall take the largest place it is capable of taking in secondary education and in the life of this community.

Our community is essentially a framework of attitudes, appreciations, and understandings held in common by individuals frequently in contact with one another. We, its citizens, must accept the responsibilities which citizenship carries, leading or following, accepting or resisting, interested in our own group, but never considering it above the welfare of all groups. Then life in this community becomes a more brotherly existence, and one that satisfies the longings of the heart.

Citizenship in the larger community today with all its anxieties and fears carries the hope of the world of mighty promise and the challenge of a world of tremendous opportunity. With steady courage and brave new trust, we face our duties to our community as our predecessors did 75 years ago.

We are here today; others preceded us; others will follow us. The past has left its obligations; the future will grow out of a successful present.

J. Irvin Boyd

Principal

We, the students and teachers of Lake View High School, are justly proud of our school on this 75th Anniversary. We are proud of its glorious history of scholastic achievement; its contribution to the health and physical development of its students through its outstanding program of physical education; its great program of extra curricular activity; and its leadership in the community. We point with pride to the achievements of its graduates, and to the splendid reputation it enjoys among the institutions of higher learning which its graduates attend. Much credit is due to the succession of great administrators and splendid teachers, to the character of its student body, and to the support it has received from the community. We look forward to a continuation of its success, and still greater achievements in the future. I am honored to have the opportunity to serve this great school in the capacity of Assistant Principal.

Aldrem P. Daniel

Assistant Principal

It is never easy to appraise accurately the value of the day-by-day routine of a large high school. It is only as one looks back over a period of years that he becomes aware of the great service that such an institution renders to the students and the community. Lake View High School has truly built, over the past seventy-five years, an outstanding record of service.

As part of this organization each succeeding class shares the responsibility of preserving the ideals and extending the influence of the school. I am confident that you, the present student body, will meet this challenge, and add to Lake View's fine record.

A Problem to Solve? Come to the Personnel

In these illustrations some idea may be gained of what the Personnel Department accomplishes. Mrs. Roche, taking the place of Miss Kreis, who is on a leave, and Mrs. Handwerk are engaged in counseling. Miss Schryver is discussing the need for scholarship aid with Miss Black in charge of folders, and Mrs. Hellman who administers the tests. Miss Greiner, the placement counselor, is in conference with Mrs. Vlasak who handles the freshmen folders. Miss Schaetzel is recording the results of English tests. Miss Hope Leech, not pictured, is the college counselor.

The personnel department was organized in 1935 under the direction of Miss Kreis. The purpose of this department is to advise and adjust students in their personnel problems. It guides them in their programs of study for preparation of their future vocations; it finds positions for graduating seniors, who are going immediately into the business world; it places students in part-time jobs while in school; and makes available information to the students for furthering their education. Miss Kreis is ably assisted by members of the faculty.

The Attendance Office Strives for a Better Lake View

The attendance office is the center to which the daily problems of the students are brought and solved.

If the trouble may be tardiness, absence, cuts or a lapse in citizenship, the students are guided under the capable supervision of Miss Eiberg, Miss Taggart, Mr. Bowen, and Mr. Solem.

A sincere attempt is made to find the causes of the students' problems; and, with the good cooperation of the parents, a solution may be readily found.

At the top left we see Mr. Bowen and Mr. Solem checking over some of the office records with the aid of the office personnel.

Miss Eiberg and Miss Taggart are pictured looking over some files.

The English Department Always Ha

Listening

English, our mother tongue, has always been included in every American school curriculum. Seventy-five years ago it was a rigid course based strictly on the requirements for college preparation. Students had to learn and study such literary pieces as Burke's "Conciliation" and Milton's "Paradise Lost," as well as many of Shakespeare's dramas. The reason for these strict requirements was simply that a high school education was not compulsory, and that children who attended the secondary schools either intended to go to college or wanted a general education. As times have changed and it is required to attend school until the age of sixteen, the English course has not only to prepare those who are going on to college, but to help all students make adjustment to life.

Adapted Itself to Changing Standards

rdings From "Hamlet"

Soon after the first World War democratic ideas, and a more liberal way of thinking, changed the formal procedure in class. Today we have group activities and informal discussions. With the help of films and records we are able to attain a greater understanding of the world around us. The modern English course has adapted itself to these problems.

A special class in remedial reading is one of the helpful additions to the English course. It assists those who have not had the opportunity to do much reading.

The following pages illustrate some of the activities of the English Department. There are also contributions from the students of the various grade levels.

From Ruskin's "Sesame and Lilies"

Getting Pointers From Visiting Authors

An Hour Spent Wisel "Looking" for a Vocatio

In English IV we are introduced to regional novels. This course is given to high school students in order to familiarize them with the different sections and peoples of our nation.

This year we were fortunate in having a lecture by some well-known authors of regional novels. They are: Evelyn Grumbine McNally, editor of "Child Life" and author of "This is Mexico," who has written many career and travel books; Mrs. Francesca Miller, poet, novelist, and dramatist, whose latest book, "The Sands," is a story of early Chicago; and Franklin Meine, President of "The Friends of the Chicago Library" and an editor of the "American People's Encyclopedia," who is an authority on American folklore.

One Word

An education is more than a little "book learning" picked up here and there. It stretches beyond a dry accumulation of facts carefully tucked into the corners of rebellious young brains by determined teachers. It has a scope and a power never hinted at in crowded classrooms where, unconsciously, restless pupils are having a precious gift thrust toward them.

"Educated"—the password that can admit them into a society of beautiful living—is slowly being indelibly etched onto their characters.

"Educated"—a smiling future stamps firmly on the eager youth hurrying through her portals in quest of tomorrow. The strong imprint of that single word can be traced all the way back through 1876 and Lake View's first lonely graduate. What vast meaning has it to fit so many for so long a time? Certainly it cannot apply to tangible information, for how much more we know today than we did seventy-five long years ago.

To Sandburg's "Rootabaga Stories"

Power of Expression is Gained through Discussion

The common meeting ground between past and present is found during classes never recorded in books. Citizenship, for instance, remains the same in a class of eight or five hundred, the only difference being in the number of people that make up the human element. To learn the art of living in harmony with the rest of the world is to receive the best education offered anywhere, and working in a society of equals gradually forces nearly every student to realize that the ideas and desires of other people are as important as his own. A lesson in friendship can become one of the warmest heartfelt pleasures in life if memorized properly; for, though, today's names and the laughing happiness they bring may drift away into the past, the ability to make new friends, and to keep them, will linger always.

These are only a few of the incalculable number of similar courses continuing day by day, unsung, in fact, unnoticed in the shadow of school walls. Standing as they do, however, for one word, they mean more than all the history, physics, and algebra lessons combined; because that one word, in turn, can stand for the happiness of a man's life, his courage to face hardships, his faith in tomorrow, and his ability to live in peace with himself and his neighbor.

One simple word—"Educated."

The Treasures of World Literature

Choosing a Suitable Cover For Our "Vocational Theme"

Have you ever helped your family prepare for moving, vacation, out-of-town visits, or any such project which requires long preparation? Most likely you have. You are preparing yourself for something about which you know very little, and, certainly, you cannot be sure of the outcome. How about another trip; the one that takes you to adulthood? Are you prepared for it? Once you are out of school, you should be prepared for your stay in the world of adults. You should think, plan, study, and develop the personality that will win you friends and hold your job; the job you like; the one you have planned for; the one that you chose, as it supports you.

Our library at Lake View helps us to look into the future. The numerous books found there show us what is to be required of us in the vocations we choose. After reading a book on a potential vocation, if we decide that we are not interested in that particular field, all the time we spend on it is a few short weeks, instead of years of preparation which only prove we are not suited for the job. Yes, Lake View, our English teachers, and the library are all to be commended for helping us to prepare for our trip to the future.

Are Constantly Being Discovered

Above is a Scene from the Dramatization of the Poem "Hiawatha"

Reflections

The wood a little thinner on the stair,
A seat smooth worn, a book dog-eared with wear,
A desk initial-blessed,
An added wrinkle, more or less, upon some face
To mark each going.
These only can be measured with the years;
All else is memory—sight and sound subtracted wholly from the atmosphere
Of these dear halls, and now become a part of all
Who knew the rare peculiar combination of ideas and laughter and shared enterprise
That they called learning, and now recognize as something more.
For scores take with them, year by year, upon their forward start
A spirit fostered deep within—a little bit of Lake View's heart.
And the school's tradition of giving goes on
From an inexhaustible source, and shall, while there come fresh, eager minds
To but supply the force.

My Two Pests

Two little bundles of homeliness, two little bundles of mischief, describes my two little turtles—Muscles and Twitterpated. Of course, other people have had turtles, but my adventures with Muscles and Twitterpated can't be "beat." Both are curiously clumsy and their heads are continuously moving. They are as sly as a fox, yet always good (while I'm watching them). But, if I give them a chance to be alone . . . Heaven help me if I can find them again! One time I placed a bridge on the innerside of their bowl for them to climb on for recreation or rest, but Muscles and Twitterpated used this as a stepping stone TO GET OUT OF THEIR BOWL!! Yes, you may think I exaggerate when I tell you, (and maybe I do) but I would never part with Muscles and Twitterpated despite the trouble their meanderings cause me, for I don't know how I could live without them.

Five Minutes at My Window

One cool afternoon in October, when I was reading a story, my mother called me to the window. I was interested in my book, and I replied, "Oh! Gee! Mom, I'm right in the best part!" But Mom, being the sweet, adorable mother that she is, insisted. When I went to the window I was really glad she had interrupted my reading. I saw a beautiful sky, and a distant scene in which the sun, shining at its brightest, beamed through the limbs of the leafless trees casting mysterious colored shadows on the foreground, while various shadings filled the sky. In the distance was a beautiful church which completed the picture. How I wished that I were an artist so that I might interpret the beauty which I enjoyed in those five minutes at my window!

Desiring a Well-Rounded Education

Awakening

The breezes blew softly
And then came the sun
All crimson and happy
Twinkling with fun.

The dewdrops rose sweetly
And met with a cloud.
The trees bent discreetly
Not speaking aloud.

The shadows of midnight
Were now past and gone,
The birds welcome daylight
For this was the dawn!

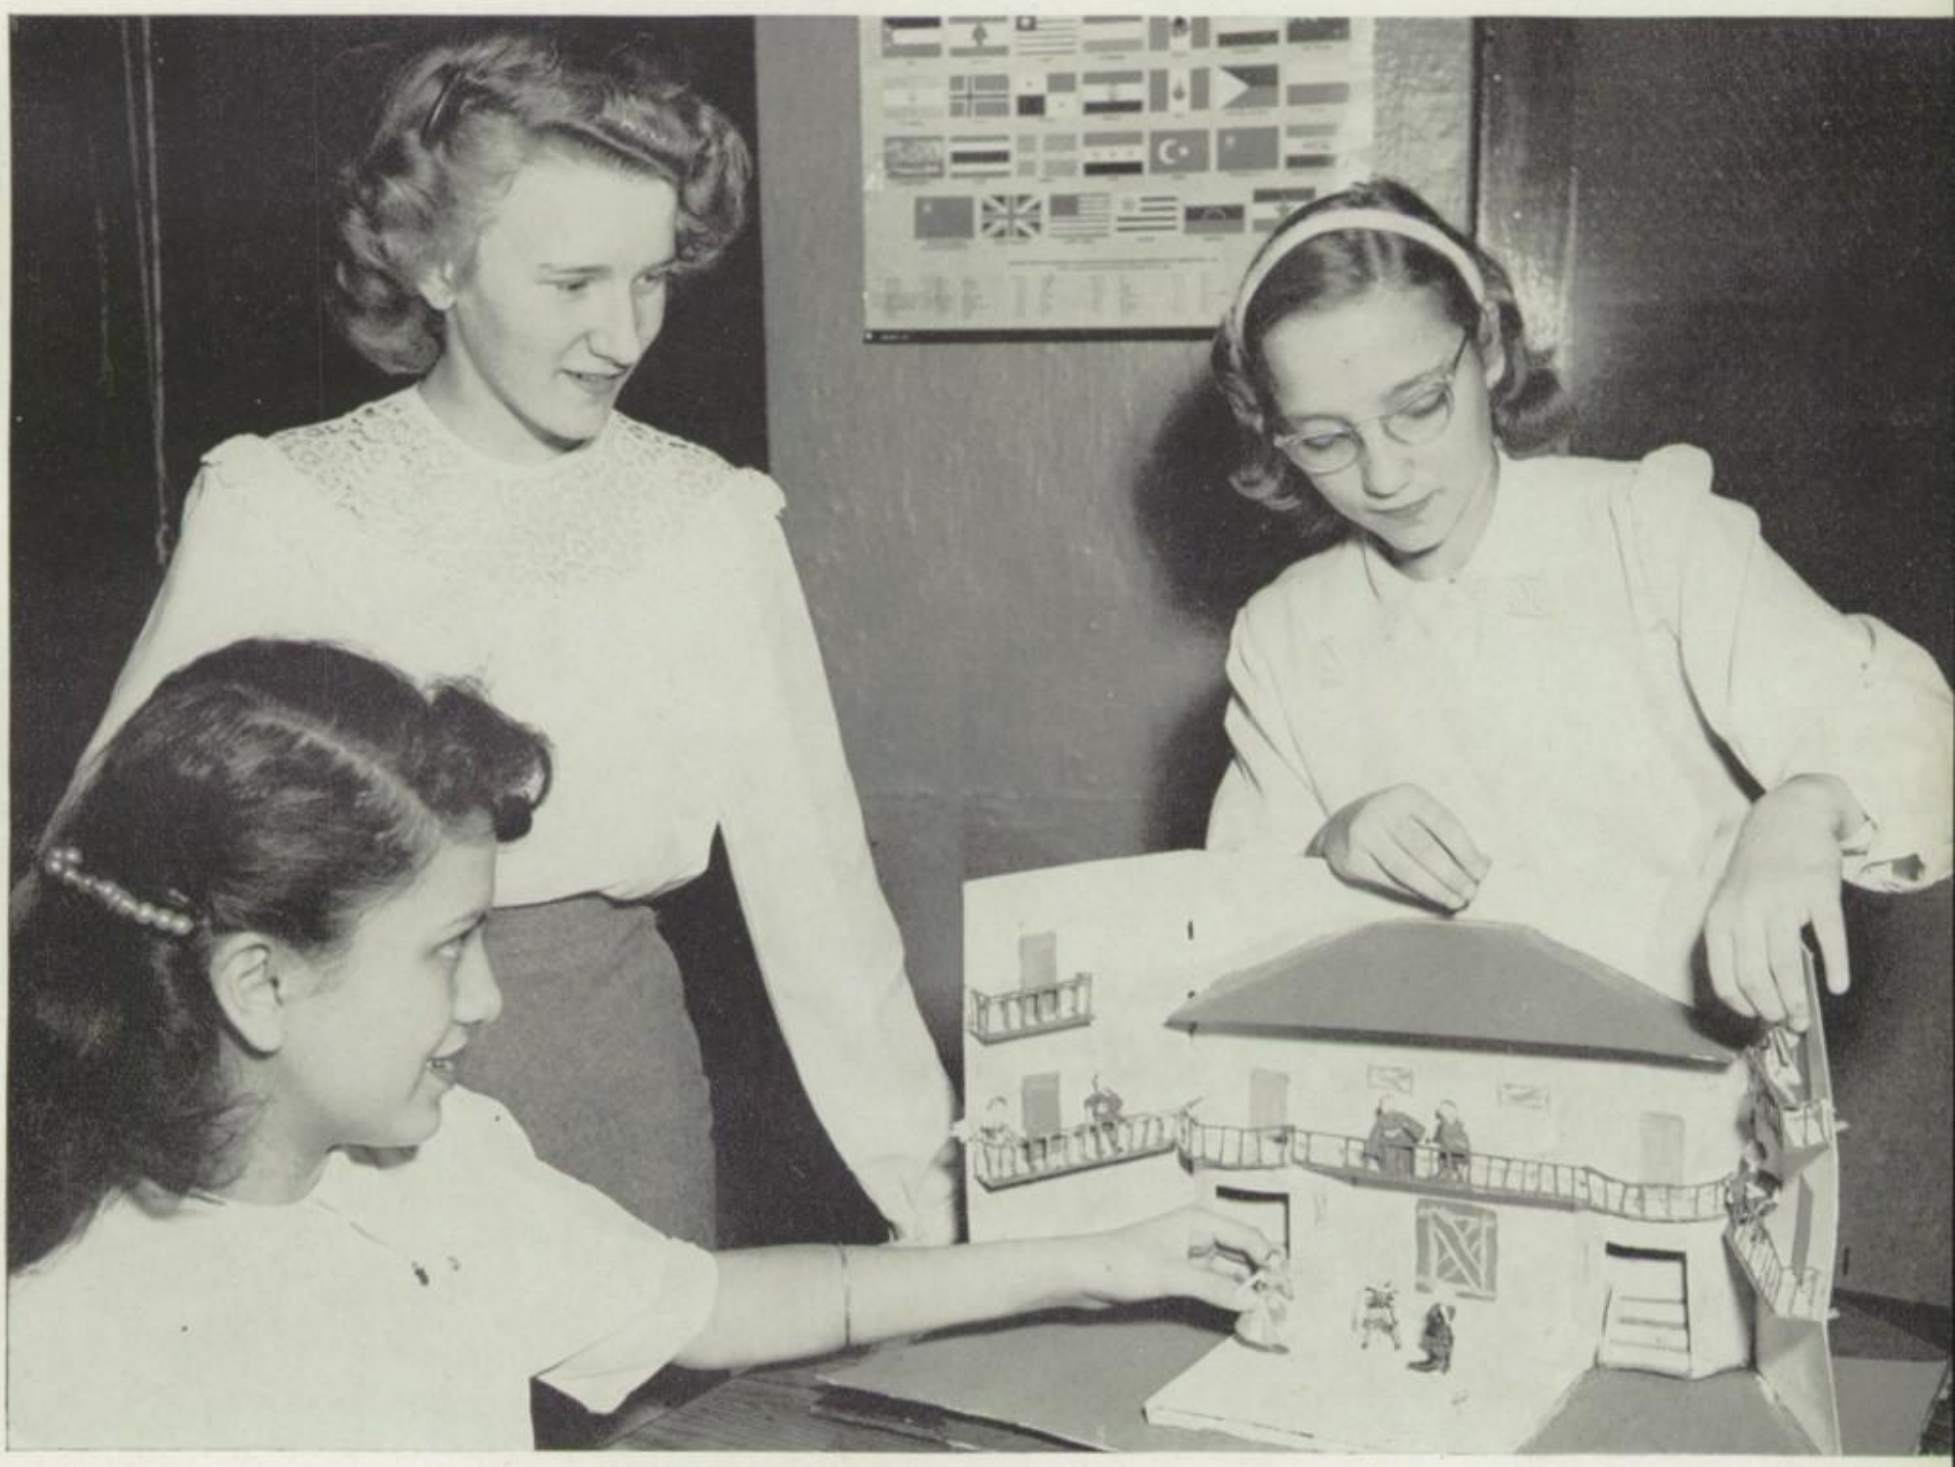
The scaled model pictured below is a copy of the "Globe Theater" at Stratford-on-the-Avon, an excellent example of the type popular in Shakespeare's time. They had no roof over the center, and the spectators had to take the weather as it came. The lack of curtains on the stage often led to amusing situations, such as the deceased rising up from their deathbeds and walking off the stage so that the next scene might be prepared.

This model was carefully constructed by Elizabeth Ramos, Joan Fritz, and Mary Ann Mertz, all from one of our English II classes.



We Learn by Doing

"Sprechen Sie Deutsch?"

German has long been a popular subject at Lake View. It is a well-known fact that German is valuable in the field of science, medicine, and engineering. Furthermore, many parents, being of German ancestry, want their children to have an understanding of the language.

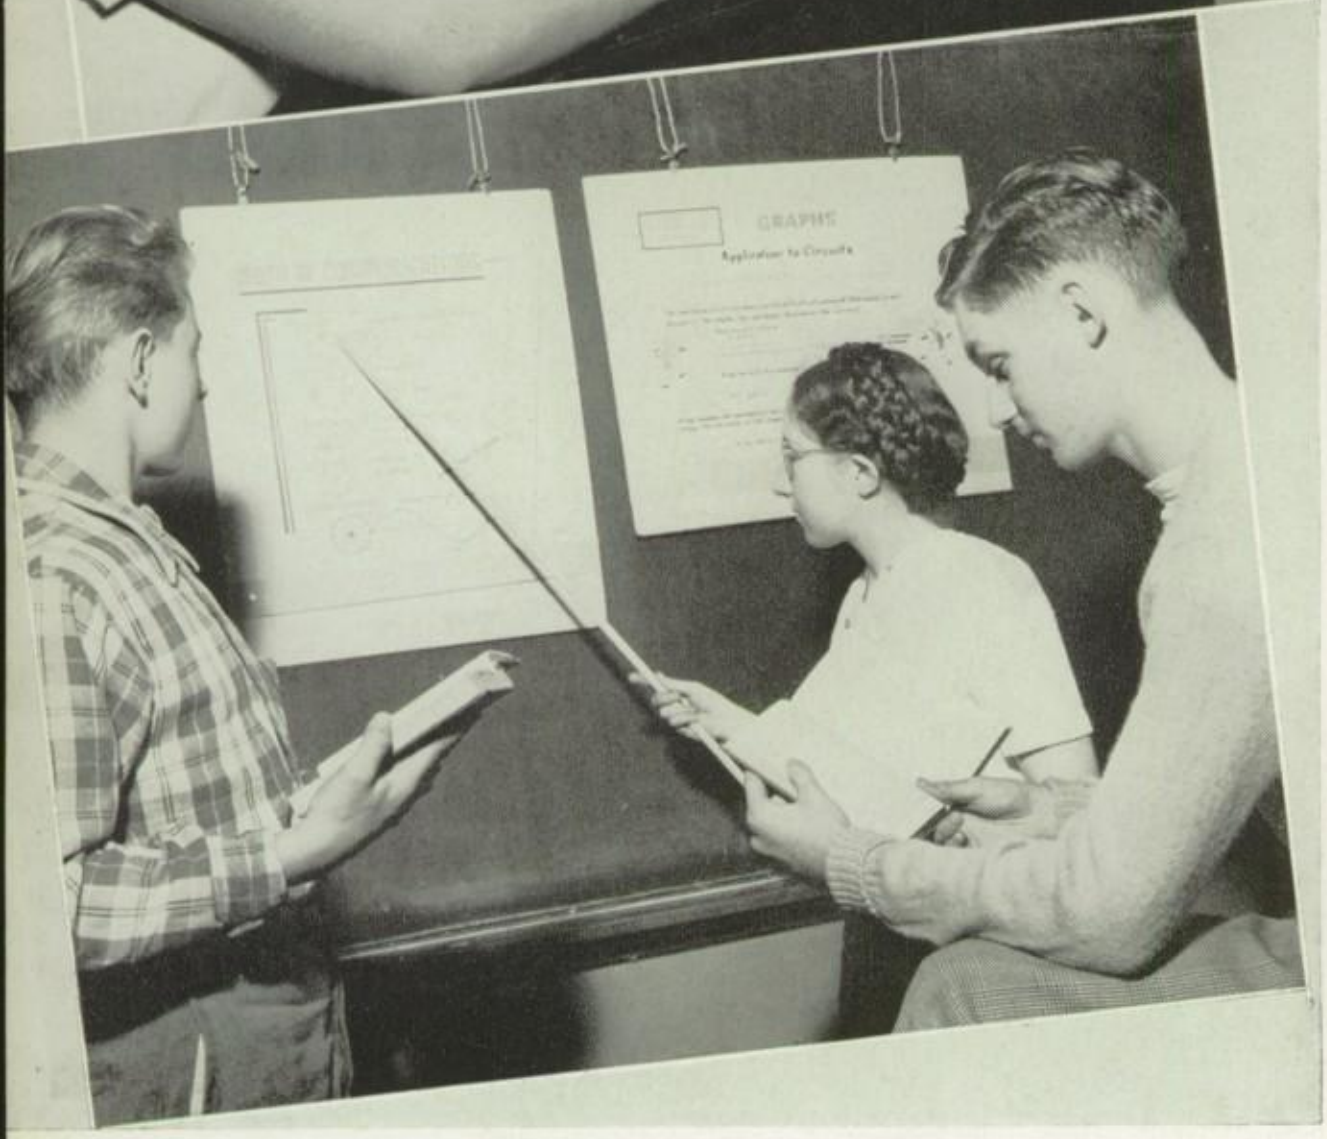
A student studying German not only learns to speak and read the language, but also develops an appreciation for German literature. The students in the picture below on the left are admiring a statue of Goethe and Schiller who lived in, and were part of, the romantic era of poetry and music. Goethe's "Wanderers Nachtlied" is one of the many poems studied by the various classes. The students also read modern stories. Many charming illustrations for "Emil und die Detektive" were drawn by the students. One is shown below. At the bottom is a picture of the panel discussion on Student Government given for the German educators, who visited Lake View last October, to show them how democracy is practiced in our school. At Christmas time the German classes have a party and sing familiar "Lieder" such as "O, Tannenbaum" around the Christmas tree near the main entrance.

Language Ties Strengthen the Bond of Unity Among Men

In the illustration at the right several students are reading a Spanish magazine during an informal discussion period.

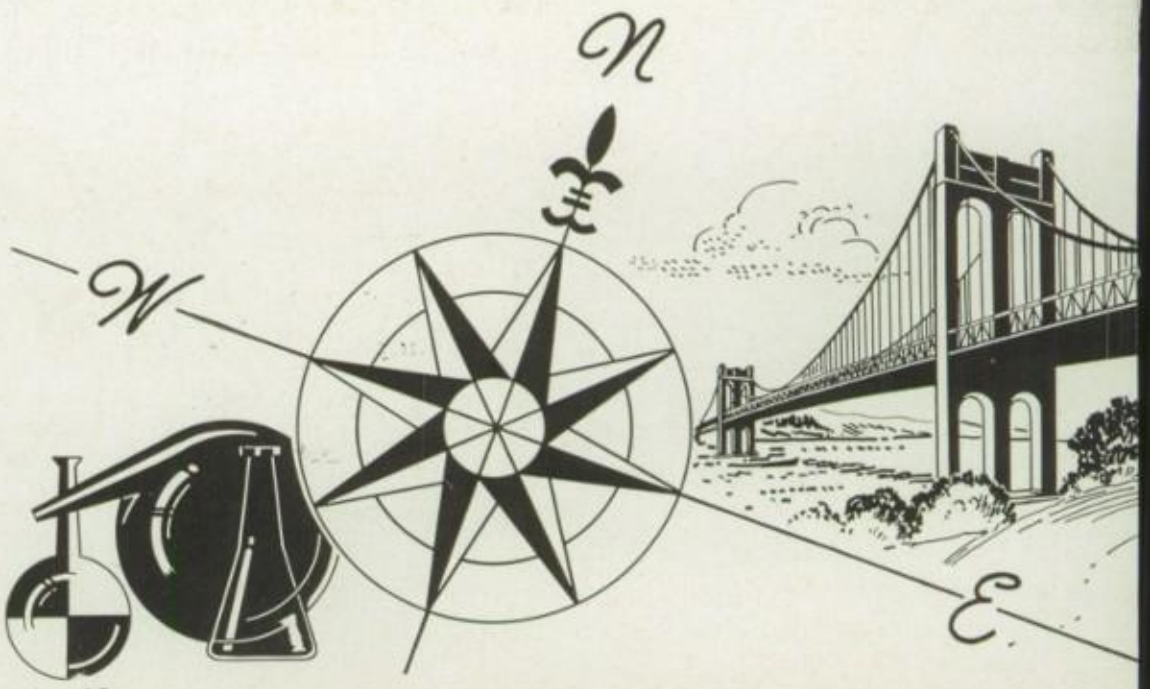
The picture above depicts a Latin class in action. The students are producing a play which they, themselves, wrote.

The ability to speak a foreign language is a valuable asset. It aids in developing a well-rounded cultural background, for you cannot learn a man's language without gaining some conception of his traditions, customs, and way of life. Every student who elects a language course also knows the thrill of accomplishment that comes from being able to converse in a foreign tongue. For these reasons Latin and French have always been taught at Lake View, while Spanish was introduced in later years as a result of our "Good Neighbor Policy" in respect to the Latin American countries.



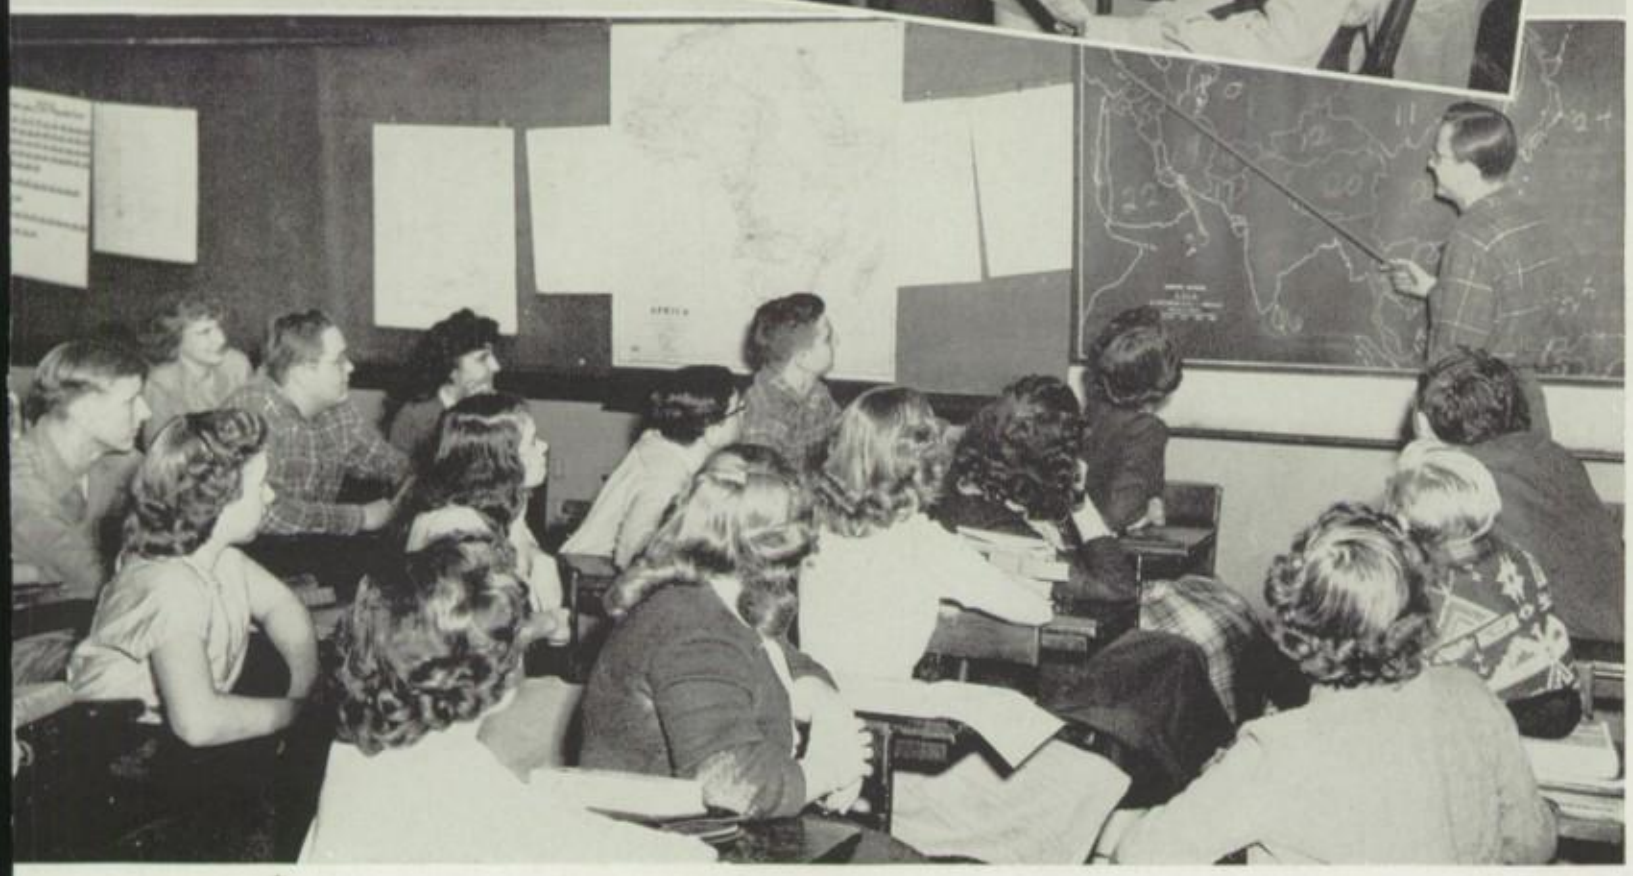
Mathematics — A Basic Subject

The volume of a cylinder, the tangent of an angle, the Pythagorean theorem—all of these terms are well known by our mathematics students. Mathematics has been offered at Lake View since the founding of the school. Acquiring an interest in mathematics at this early stage has led many a student to follow navigation, engineering, and science as their life-work. Mathematics is essential to these professions.



Miss Gumbiner's students are learning how an election is conducted through actual participation in a mock ceremony of the proceedings.

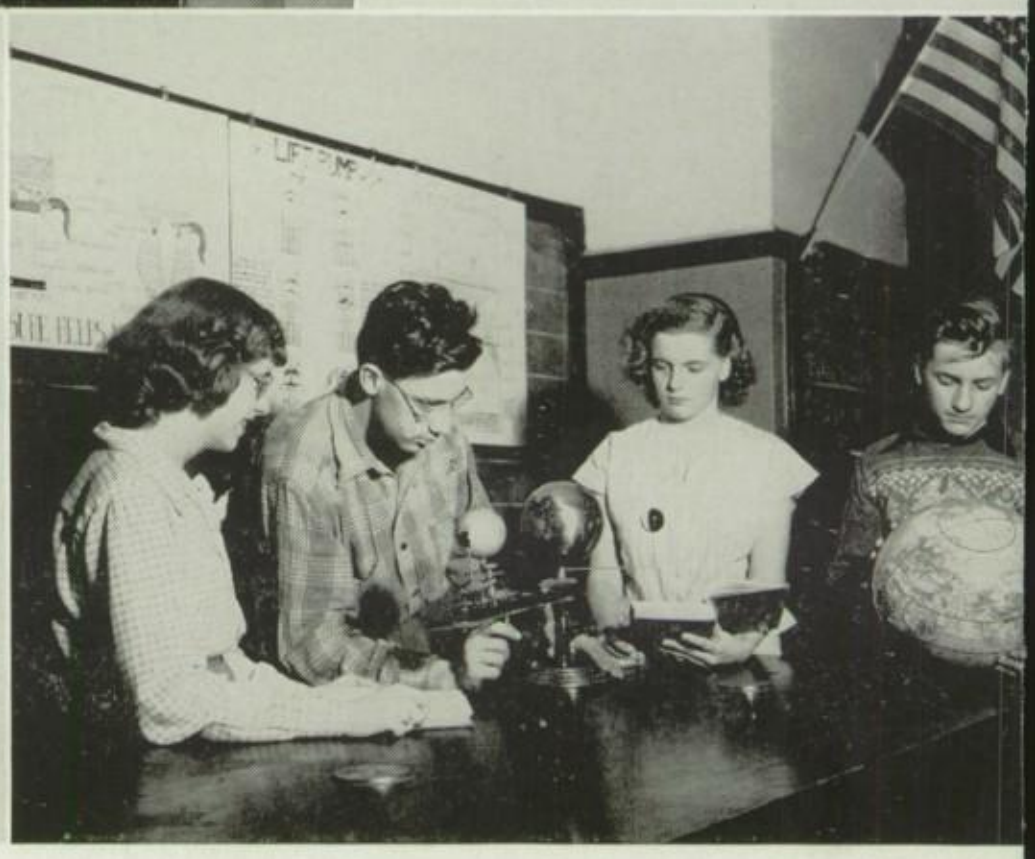
In Mrs. Adrogna's Ancient History class boys and girls are recording various topic reports to be kept for future reference.



A country's history depends largely upon its geographical position. A class is seen here identifying Asia's countries.

The Social Sciences Lead Us to a Better Understanding of the World

Civics, economics, and the histories—should constitute a major part of every person's education, for nowhere else can he acquire knowledge that so profoundly influences his daily life. It is the strength upon which he can base mature, thoughtful opinions; the security in which he may invest for a richer fuller life; and the guide on which he can depend to lead him safely through the future's bewildering maze. No minute, hour, or year is aloof from the endless chain of time. Each sweetly-dreamed tomorrow lays its foundation in a living today, and every today snatches its life from the breath of a forgotten yesterday. The prophecy of what is to come is recited by the past—we are implored only to listen.



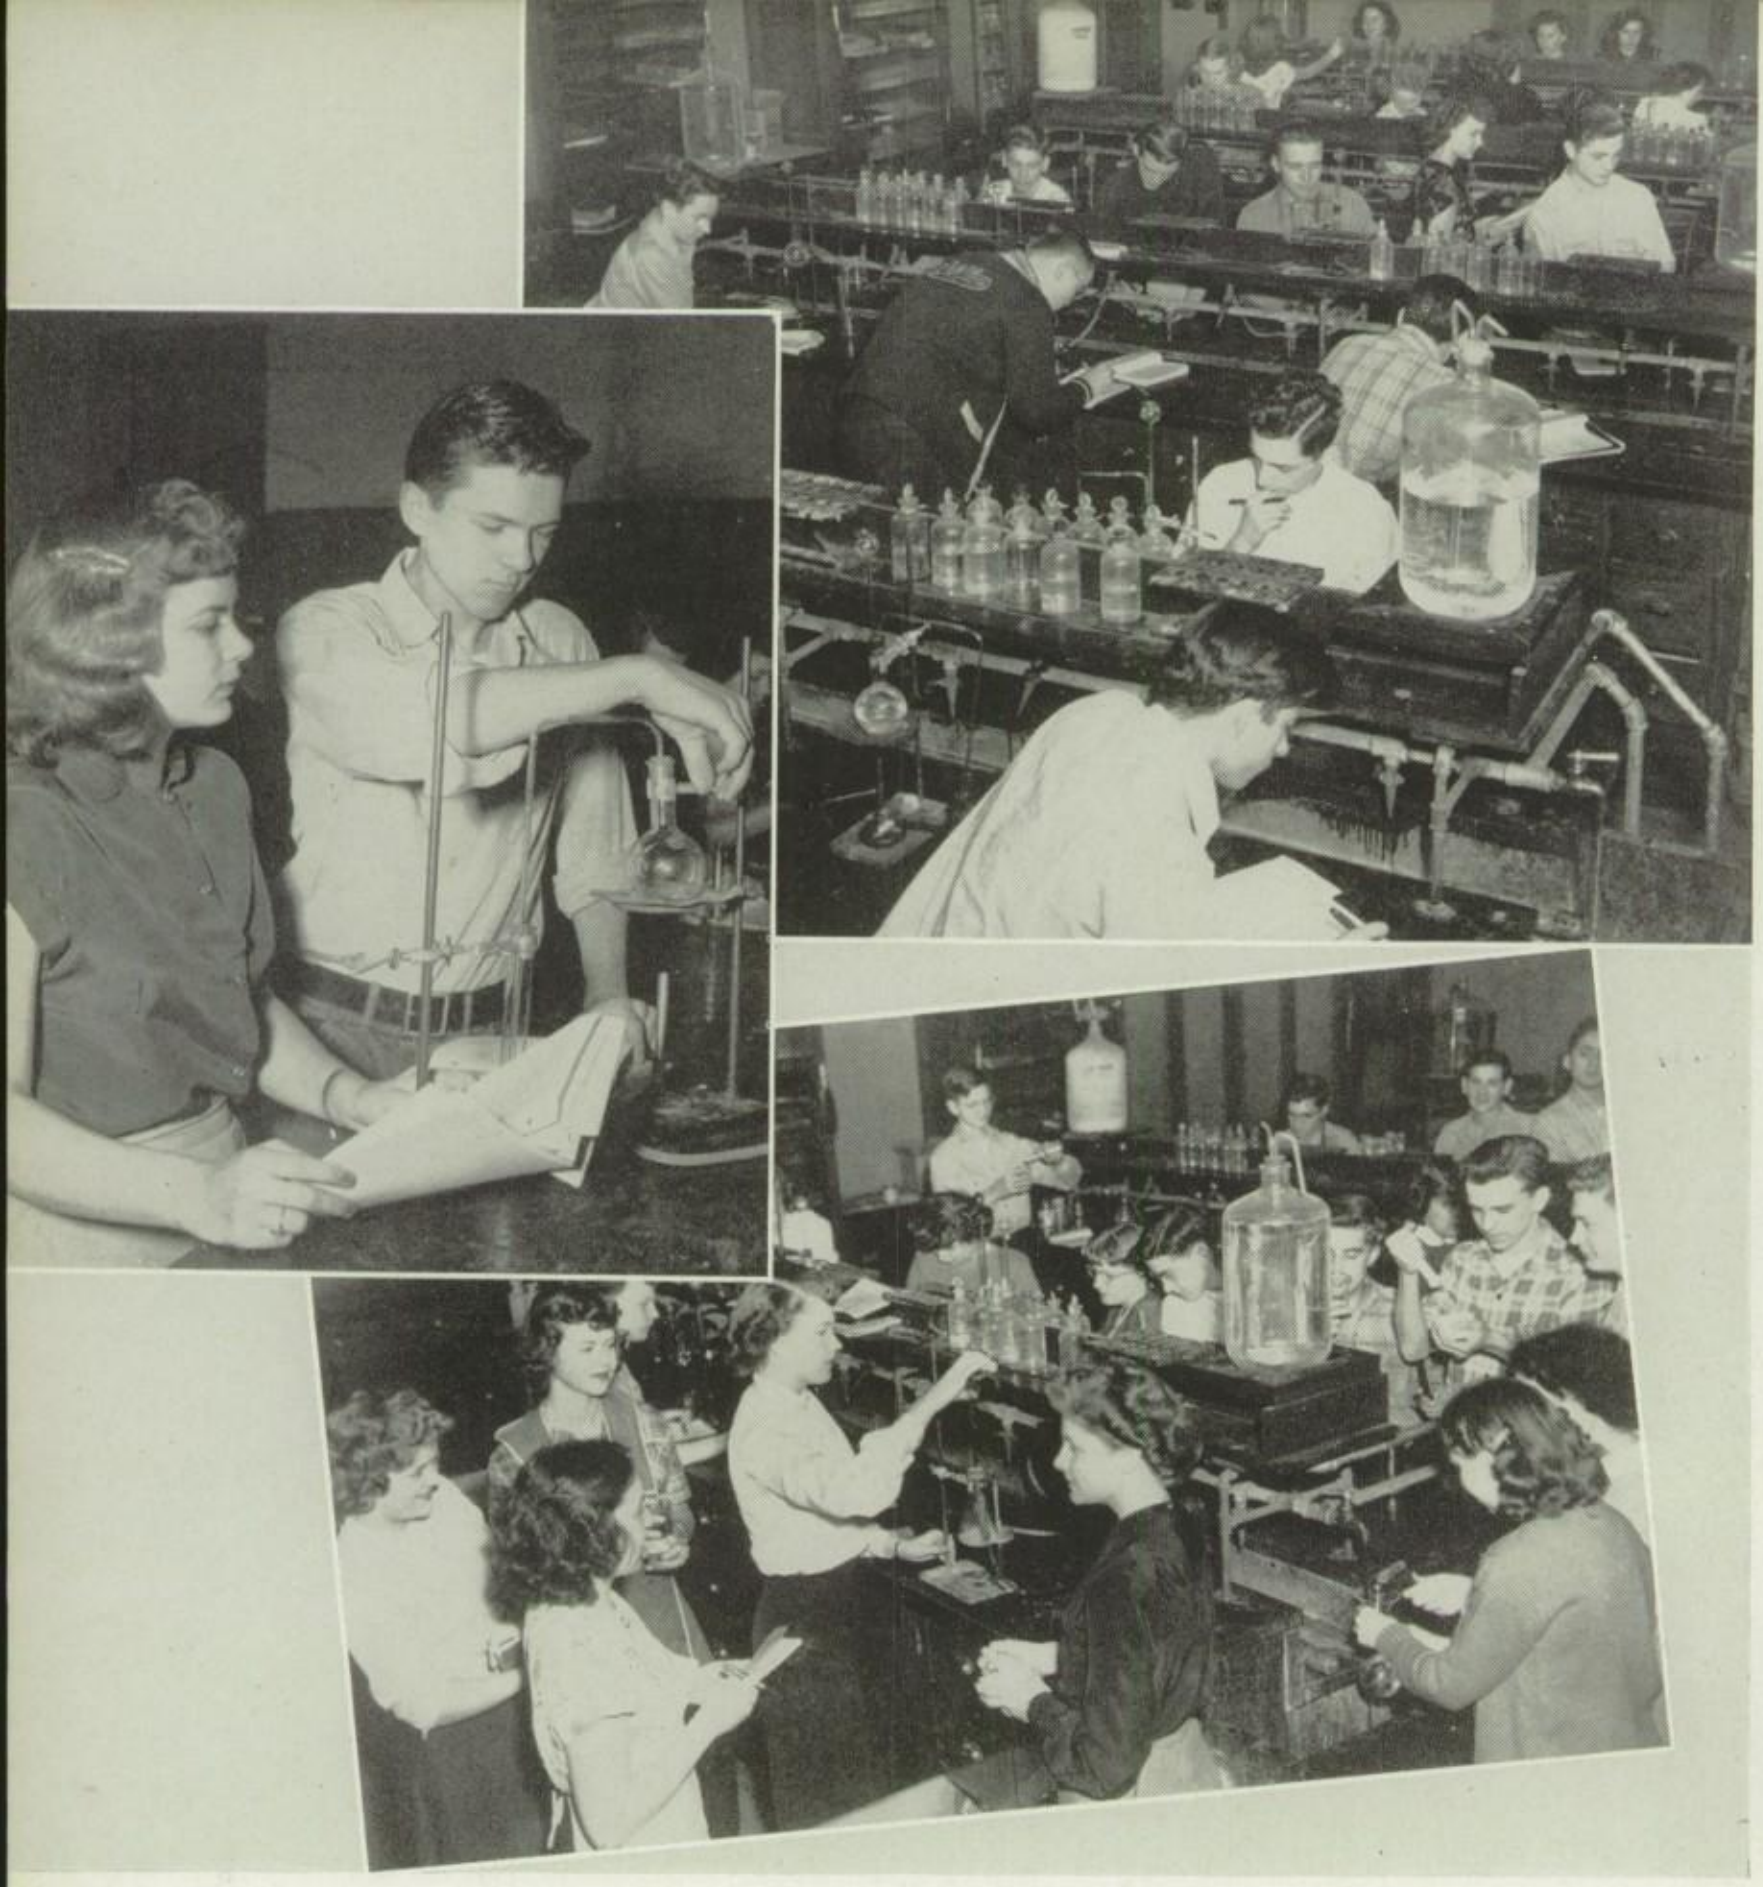
Scratching the Surface

The general science course contains a smattering of everything, as shown in the pictures above, where the students are studying light, combustion, static electricity, the organic systems, and the relative sizes of the moon, earth, and sun. This gives freshmen an introduction to the subjects available to them in the science curriculum. The knowledge gleaned from science often has been proven useful by alert students who are mindful of the close relationship of their lives and the world about them.

Unfolding Life's Mysteries

Biology fills eager young minds with facts about living things. It opens for us a new world, inhabited by microscopic animals and plants, as well as those seen by us every day. We learn to identify all living things according to their classification on the tree of life. We are instructed in the processes of evolution as theorized by Darwin and his fellow scientists. Biology has always been an important, and popular branch of the science department at Lake View.

The students shown are studying fossils, the organs of the frog, and the parts of the flower.



The busy chemistry students in the above pictures are making hydrochloric acid, and testing for unknown compounds.

Experimenting with the Future

Elementary chemistry is an attempt to discover why substances act as they do. A chemist learns not to accept written facts, but to ask "how" and "why," and to experiment until he finds the answers to these questions. He unveils hidden wonders through the medium of the test tube—pain-relieving drugs such as penicillin and sulfa, or metals stronger than steel and lighter than wood. There is no end as to what may be discovered through the experimentation being done today.

The students shown in the upper picture are performing an experiment having to do with electricity. The lower picture shows a common experiment with weights.

Man's Conquest of the Spheres

There are few subjects that touch a person's life so closely as elementary physics. From the time a water faucet is opened in the morning until the light is turned off at night, some principle of physics is constantly being observed. It may deal with the mechanics of automobiles or television, or perhaps it has to do with baseball or some other sport. Physics is not a new subject. For seventy-five years it has been on the curriculum at Lake View.

Our Girls Train Today

When Household Arts was first introduced in Chicago fifty-one years ago, a preparation in home-making was its only objective. As time has passed, women have entered the business and professional world, and now there are unlimited opportunities in the field of Household Economics. Lake View Alumnae have obtained positions as dietitians in hospitals and institutions of all types, in textile and food advertising, and managing tea-rooms and restaurants.

For the Pattern of Tomorrow

Do not let those studious and industrious faces fool you! These girls are learning how much fun sewing can be. The pictures above show the various steps required in making a dress. Each stage is important from the selection of the pattern and cutting of the material to the turning of the hem. Then, there is a lesson in proper grooming, and they are ready to step out in the finished product.

The Way to Every Heart

A "jack of all trades" is the synonym for homemaker. To buy and spend wisely, to cook an appetizing meal, to sew, and to acquire good taste in home furnishings are included in the Home Economics course. Under the guidance of our Household Arts Teachers, the girls learn to budget the family income, to care for a child, and to be well-groomed. A Red Cross instructor gives a number of demonstrations in home nursing during the semester. Its direct reference to living makes Home Economics a practical subject.

Is A Delicious Meal

These girls will never be in a position similar to that of Mother Hubbard. With the excellent supervision of their instructors they are taught how to can foods, how to prepare a meal, serve it, and make the kitchen sparkle. Of course, the most fun is in the eating. They find, however, that the kitchen holds many joys, and that there is more to cooking than meets the eye.

Be Prepared for All Needs

Today the modern girl not only learns to cook and sew at Lake View, but also to manage emergencies that upset the daily routine. She is taught how to make an invalid comfortable with inexpensive equipment that is obtainable in the average home. She also learns how to read a medical thermometer and to take the pulse; to make a hospital bed; and wash her hands in the correct manner.

That Arise in the Home

In the discussion of child care, the proper toys for children are selected, and reasons for so doing are given. A knowledge of decorating her home attractively and economically is acquired. The student is taught the right way to issue an invitation, to receive guests, to entertain, and to be a charming hostess. Not to be forgotten is the lesson on being a perfect house guest. This is just a glimpse of the many activities offered in Home Management.

The Commercial Departmen

Day by day as Lake View has grown older it has become increasingly alert to the necessity of keeping abreast of the times. The vast gap between a tiny agricultural community and a huge industrial metropolis was a long step to be taken by education; but it was done successfully along a series of stepping stones from one subject to another, until these have finally mounted up to become a wide variety of courses including almost everyone.

These pictures illustrate:

1. The operation of a dictaphone.

2. A bookkeeping class in action.

3. The use of the calculator.

4. The preparation of the daily absentee bulletin on the mimeograph.

Trains Our Young People

Bookkeeping was the first commercial subject taught here, for it was part of the school's original curriculum. Stenography and typing followed soon after the turn of the century. The latter subjects have developed into an extensive course where the student may learn, not only the theory of shorthand, but also the proper manner of taking actual dictation and transcribing notes.

In Accuracy, Efficiency, and Responsibility

The impetus in business caused by the First World War added a whole host of new courses to the department, and raised enrollment of the classes to the point where fifty-one per cent of the student body was represented in them. Clerical Practice was one of the new subjects which grew steadily in popularity. Out of its meager beginning in a small, poorly-outfitted room, it has developed into a special, well-equipped office where the proper use of the calculator, mimeograph, dictaphone, and various types of files is taught. This room was one of the first five of its kind in the city.

Here are seen:

1. Study of a map of Europe.
2. A busy Comptometry class.
3. A special stenography class transcribing its notes.
4. An advertising class learn how to sell.

For a Secure Place in the Business World

Commercial Geography, Comptometry, Salesmanship, and Advertising are the most recent subjects to be introduced into the department. Through the first of these students gather a comprehensive picture of the industrial world; the second points the way toward a well-paying vocation where expert operators are in constant demand; while the last group offers a preliminary peek into the mammoth field of advertising. Yes, our Commercial Department has expanded greatly, but its motif remains the same,—"Business demands courtesy and accuracy; business wants superior workers; business needs loyalty and service; and business gets a combination of all in a Lake View student!"

You Can Not Say a Mean or Sarcastic Thing"

— John Ruskin

In 1938 Mr. Irving R. Letchinger took over the orchestra. This great organization not only became an asset to Lake View, but also grew into one of the finest high school orchestras. Every member puts his heart and soul into every note he plays, and in return he receives the great satisfaction of helping to produce beautiful music. In order to become a member of the Senior Orchestra, one must play in three other orchestras: the Beginners', the Junior, and the Intermediate. The real reward for one's effort and hard work in the minor orchestras is the enjoyment and satisfaction found when one had reached his final goal—the Lake View Senior Orchestra!

Young Voices Burst Forth in Song

In 1935 Miss Naomi Sweet organized the A Cappella Choir. At first it was just a club that met after school, but in 1936 it was entered as a regular credit course in the school curriculum. A student, in order to become a member of the choir, has to pass a vocal test given by Miss Sweet.

The assembly given in preparation for the Music Festival, and the singing of Christmas Carols in the halls at the holiday season are only two of the many traditions the A Cappella Choir has initiated in the school. The Choir has also given public appearances at the Swedish Club, the People's Church, and the City Hall. It has competed with many other schools in civic contests. This mixed group has given many beautiful performances that have long been treasured in the memories of its audiences.

Keep in Step with the Band

The first band at Lake View was organized in 1919 by Captain H. Condy. His work was to inspire thousands of youngsters who studied under his direction and that of his successor, Captain Louis D. Walz, our present conductor. Through the combined efforts of the students and Capt. Walz, the Lake View Band has maintained a high record of achievement. This year a rating of "S" was achieved. In addition to preparing for concerts and inter-school competition, the band is constantly extending itself to assist other organizations with their programs. Many famous buildings in Chicago have been dedicated by the Lake View Band, such as Lane Technical High School, the Chicago Subway, and the Michigan Avenue Bridge.

The marching band is present at football games and other rallies to spur our boys on to victory with its stirring melodies. As a unit of the R.O.T.C. it participates in a Federal Inspection, and has its own officers, including five boys and four girls.

There are student conductors and a corps of baton twirlers, who must play an instrument as well.

Let the Rafters Resound

The Glee Club, a popular organization, was established in 1937 by Miss Dorothy M. Hutchins. Spring and Fall finds the girls' voices rising in lovely music at the popular festivals in which our soloists, Trudy Anlauf and Marilyn Craig, also add a delightful touch. Yearly there is a contest among the choral societies of the Northside High Schools. The girls work diligently to maintain the high standing, which Lake View has enjoyed through the years. Every girl in the Glee Club can remember the thrill of opening night, the curtain going up, and the first strains of a beautiful song drifting out to the audience. Further Exploration in the Realm of Music

Tradition at Lake View still prevails, but new ideas are constantly finding places for themselves in the school curriculum.

The classes in Harmony and the History of Music were introduced this year by Miss Prendergast. The pupils learn the fundamentals of harmony, and ways of applying it to composition. History of Music was organized to teach music appreciation to interested students.

Here we see the class at work. The picture to the side is of two Harmony students reviewing their assignment.

Miss Sara Campbell is working with a group of freshmen at Greeley, preparing them for future work in the music department.

Everyone has a Place at Lake View

There were sixteen pupils in the Deaf-Oral Room in September, 1942, when Mrs. Maiden first introduced the course. It was through the need for such a class room that it was established. Why here at Lake View? Well, there was no place for girls with handicaps to go to school and learn on the north side. There was a demand for it, and this being a fine school and in a good location, it was offered here.

The atmosphere is very informal and conducive to learning. The students go to Room 211 whenever they have a study period. In the picture you see above the pupils are being given auricular training through the use of the group hearing aid. Through the coaching and instruction in lip-reading of both Mrs. Maiden and Mrs. Turk, students are able to keep their grades up to standard.

Lake View, always doing the best for her students, added in 1942, the Sight Saving Room 304. Mrs. Courtney helps students with poor vision to conserve their sight, and work to the best of their ability. The room is well equipped with movable and adjustable furniture. Sea-green walls, indirect lighting, and the absence of shiny surfaces all aid the students in preserving their vision. Mrs. Courtney uses a special typewriter with letters a quarter of an inch high to help them with the lessons. The principles founded by Mrs. Courtney, if followed by everyone, would prevent much of the strain and many of the headaches brought on by modern living.

Commercial Art—the picture language of America. It is an art which tells a story for a commercial purpose. It may be a picture on the cover of a magazine to make that magazine attractive, make it wanted, make it sell. It may be a picture of an automobile to create a desire to own it. It may be a picture of people enjoying the comforts and luxuries of modern living. Our Commercial Art course at Lake View covers a tremendous range of interest and activities. It includes illustrations for posters and window displays. It includes designs for packages and trademarks, layouts and lettering, and booklets. It includes technical drawings, charts, and a study of color. The most important reasons for taking this course are to gain a sound basic training, the basic fundamentals, and the techniques you must know today. The course also aims to help you develop that talent and use that imagination. The boys and girls who have achieved great success in this field are the ones who had a sincere desire to be good artists, and who learned through study and hard work those things that every good artist must know. The course may be elected as a two or three year sequence under the instruction of Esther Roeth.

This course was started four years ago; it meets two periods a day, and carries a major credit each year. It is a departure from the regular Special Arts course in that it stresses the study of processes, techniques, tools, and the technical aspects of production found in the commercial art field today. Three and a half years ago the room was decorated especially for Advertising Art Classes.

Members of the Intermediate and Advance Classes are:

Discovering Our Creative Ability

The Art Department has always achieved a position of excellence. They have been ready, willing, and able to meet whatever has been requested of them. After a year of required art, those who are talented specialize in their chosen field of art.

At the top we see Marie De Vito posing for a class in figure drawing.

At the right L. Gillis, E. Ecale, and L. Schreiter pose with three of the twenty posters Lake View sent to the Children's Memorial Hospital.

Last October an Art Field Day Contest was held at Schurz High School. Here we see B. Sherman, G. Colton, and S. Vinck at work on the contest with Mr. Boyd looking on with interest and approval.

Develops New Interests

In the illustration at the top a "masterpiece" is being painted.

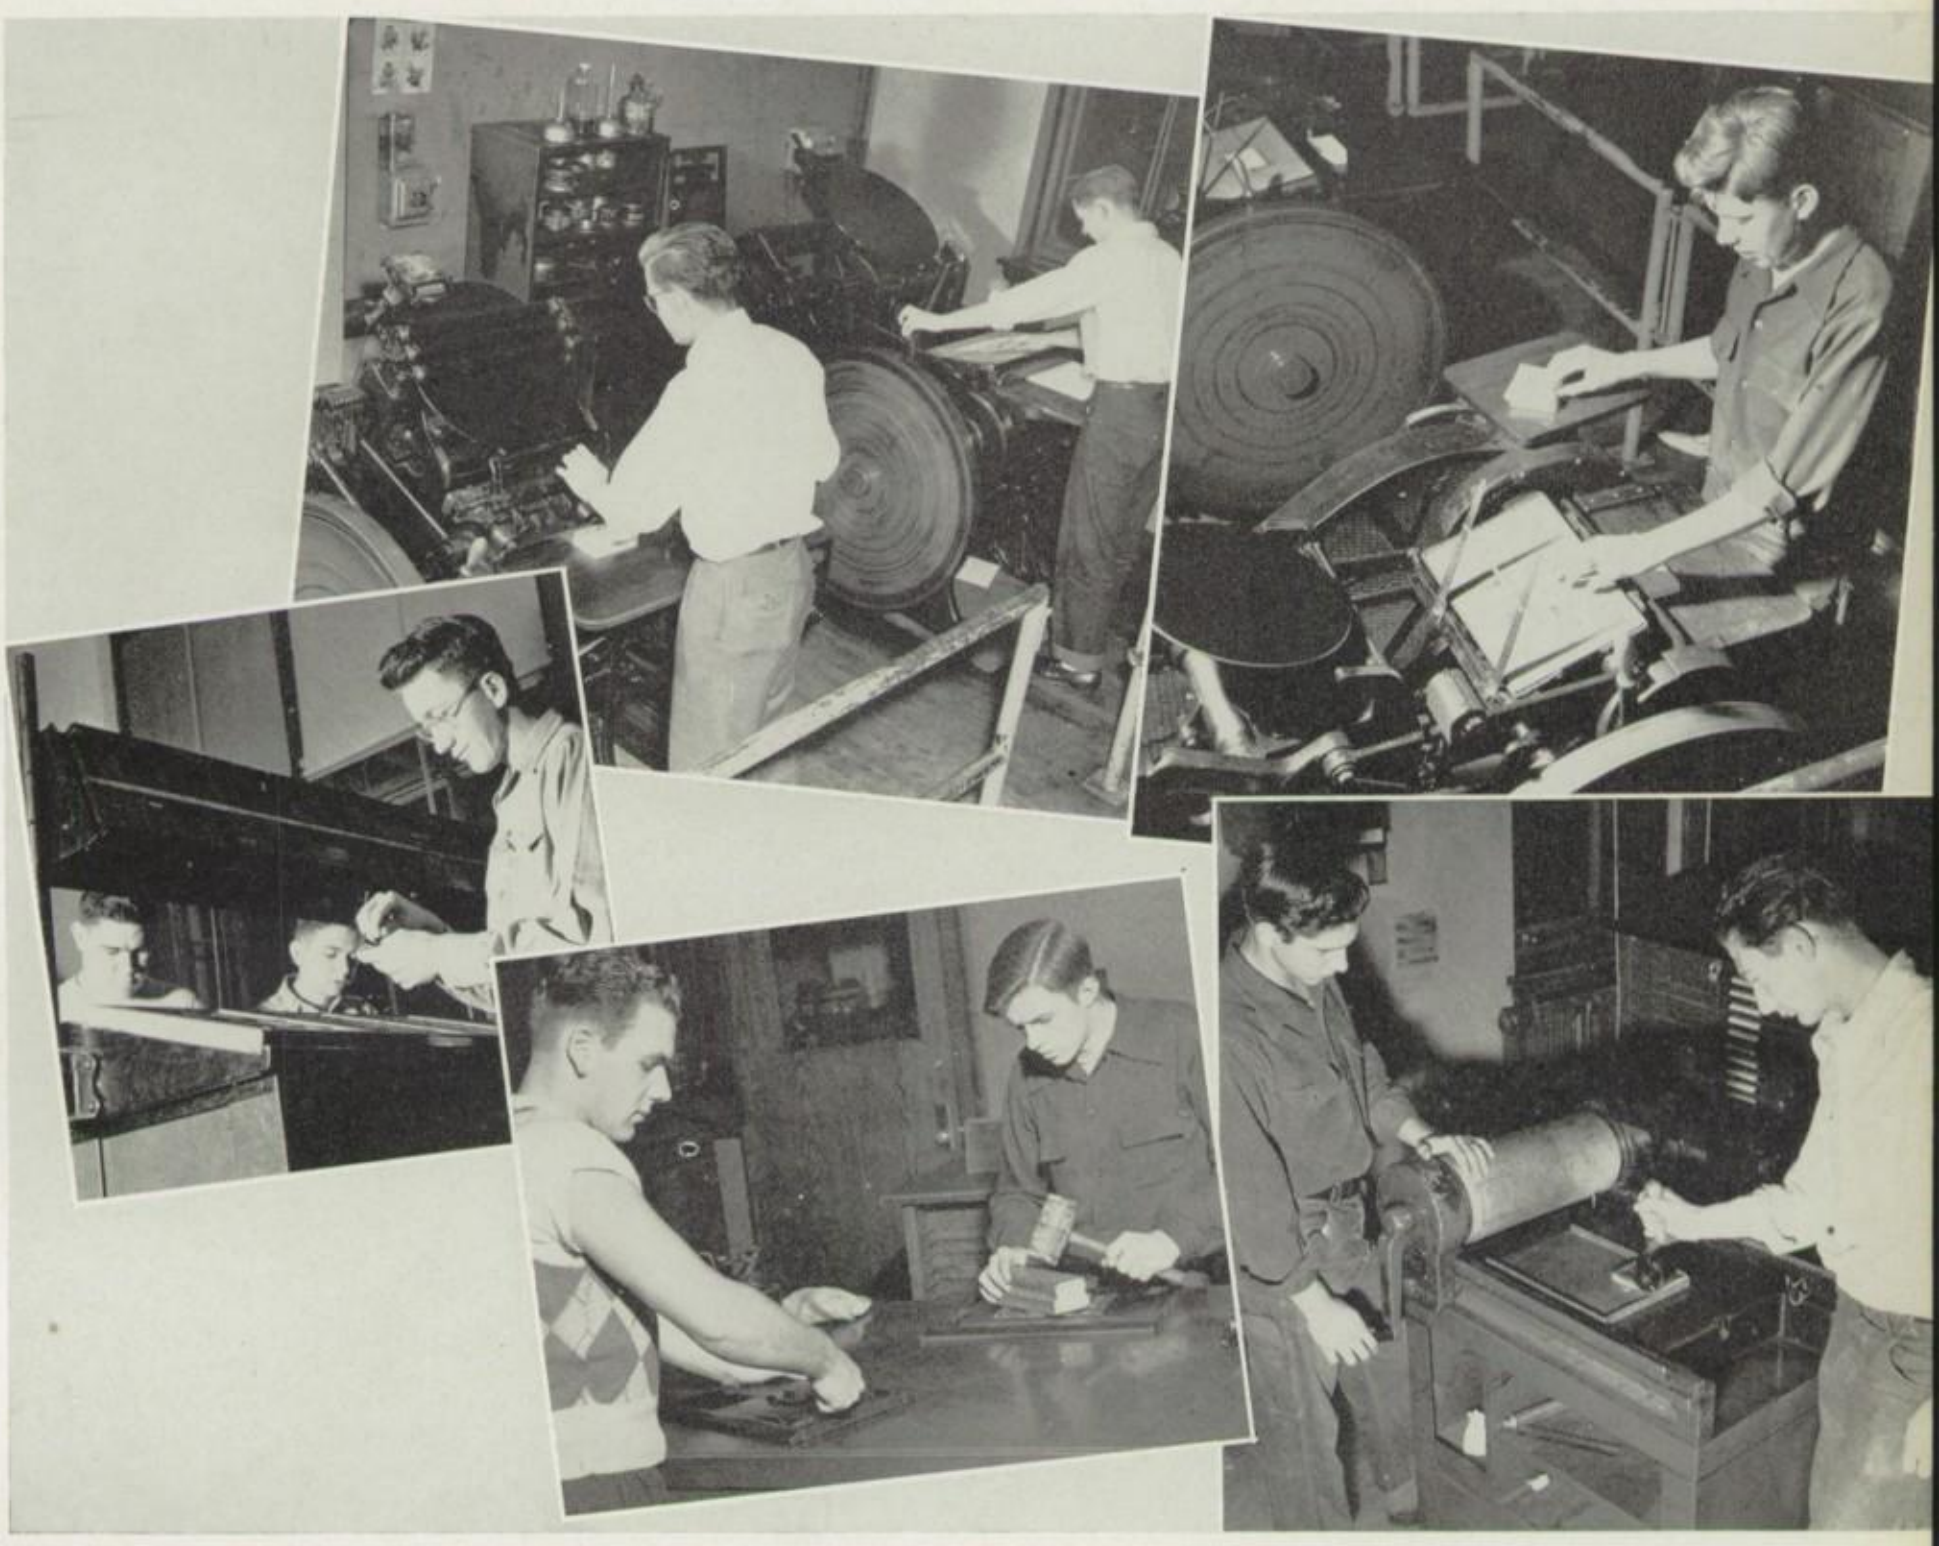
Still another department of art is pictured, that of designing. In these photographs Mr. Johnston is discussing fashion designing with nine of his students.

At the lower right students are making tree ornaments and favors for under-privileged children here and abroad.

In Industrial Arts You Find Busy Hands - Busy Minds

In the year 1939, when the annex to Lake View was built, the industrial art classes, as they are known today, were also formed. It is true that these courses were not new to Lake View, as some form of manual training had been practiced here since its founding. To those boys who are interested in working with their hands, a variety of classes is available. Among these are mechanical drawing, electric shop, wood shop, and architectural drawing. In the above two pictures we see boys sawing wood on a scroll-saw, and a jig-saw for one of their projects in wood shop. The other pictures show boys discussing their plans for a ranch-type home. You, too, could draw the plans of your dream house, if you took architectural drawing. These boys learn how to read and draw blue prints. Many of these young men will go on to a professional career in the industrial world which started for them at Lake View.

Printing — The Key to Knowledge



Printing in Lake View was first introduced in February, 1920. The first print shop was in room 231, where one hand Gordon Press and approximately ten cases of type were the only equipment. The first job was to print the Lake re View, which was originally 6 x 9½ and consisted of four pages all set by hand. For the first semester, until more type could be afforded, it had to be borrowed from other schools. The Commencement Program had to be set up at Marshall High School. In 1925 the print shop was moved to what is now our bicycle room in the basement, and new equipment, such as presses and type, were purchased. The print shop remained here until 1938, when it was moved to room 102 in the new addition.

Mr. Floyd has been our only printing instructor since its establishment. He does not attempt to teach our boys printing as a trade, but to teach them the essential fundamentals. The pictures above show the boys feeding the Gordon Press, setting type, imposing or locking up forms, and pulling proofs. With practice jobs at first, and later by doing actual work for the office, professional and first class work is accomplished.

Our Assemblies — The Pulse of the School!

Assembly day is here and the students and teachers alike are anxiously waiting for the program to start as Lake Viewites before them have done since 1874. The colors are presented, and "The Star Spangled Banner" is heard throughout the hall. Now we are ready for another assembly to begin.

The assemblies are produced by different departments, and an inspiring program is given for each national holiday. One of the most memorable of these programs was presented in commemoration of Armistice Day as shown in the picture above. Men who have fought in past wars faced east with us to pay tribute to our gold star names. Captain Andrews, who is ninety-two and well-known to every student, led the band in a patriotic song. Our drama class also presented a most impressive tableau. Thus, it was a program that will be well remembered by all who attended.

Every student is a part of the assembly, whether he is participating in the program or is in the audience. Enjoyment and relaxation is felt by everyone who attends these weekly assemblies.

Lake View — Host to Famous Personalities

Mr. McKinsie, Mr. Grenfell, Mr. Boyd.

Throughout the years Lake View has always had the opportunity to present distinguished guests at many of her assemblies. Outstanding representatives have been contributed by every field of endeavor, offering a variety of educational and entertaining programs for all students. Among them, to name a few, have been the late Lorado Taft, sculptor; Dudley Crafts Watson of the Art Institute; Dr. Gilkey of the University of Chicago; John Philip Sousa, Adele Norman, and Larry Adler of the musical world; Mrs. Paul Douglas, former Congressman; Genevieve Forbes Herrick, writer; Bill De Correvant, "Red" Grange, and George Wilson, athletes; Preston Bradley; and our own Clark Kuebler.

This year one of the most outstanding guests in Lake View's history talked to us about affairs in England. This distinguished world-famous statesman, the Honorable David Grenfell, Member of Parliament, was very much impressed with America and Lake View. Of the student body he made this pertinent statement, "How fortunate are these fine young people in having such a beautiful country, such a magnificent city, and such a wonderful educational institution."

Unrelated -- Yet Necessary for Our Welfare

Since the early twenties the Board of Education has furnished our school with free text books. Taking care of the books is a responsibility. They must be distributed, cared for, and stored. Mrs. Fisler and her group of boys are seen checking in new books.

Ill? Lose a pen? Cut your finger? Then come to Mrs. Holtzman, our able and genial matron in Room 310 at any time. In no time at all your problems will be solved or cured. The cheery atmosphere will pep you up, and you will be ready to continue on your way in tip-top shape.

There must be a bit of diversion in our daily routine. Here our students are seen laughing and chattering gaily as they meet to eat their lunch. Many pleasant times are spent gathered with friends in our clean lunchroom.

Quiet, Please! Students at Work!

The library of Lake View has grown in accordance with the times. In its original form the room had a capacity for sixty people, but with the additions in 1934 and 1936 of the South and the North rooms it now can seat one hundred sixty people.

The murals decorating the walls of the greatest part of the library tell the story of printing through the ages. These murals were done in 1918 by Elizabeth Gibson, a Lake View graduate, under the supervision of Mr. Philbrick. "Development of Education in America" can be seen in the murals of the South Room. Since they were added at a much later date, these murals were painted under the auspices of the Works Progress Administration.

No matter what the subject—health, history, or home-economics—Miss Goshkin and her assistant, Miss Funk, are always available and willing to aid the student in his preparations.

The Student Library Assistants are: P. Allison, L. Ashby, M. Bieringer, G. Blickers, P. Boyle, L. Buhr, J. Ceretta, D. Cunningham, D. Gann, R. Gann, M. Glass, C. Guenthe, M. Janis, I. Janke, R. Greeley --- Home of the Freshmen

The Greeley branch of Lake View started in February 1919 to take care of the two year commercial course which had been originally at the main building. In 1926 it was decided to change the plan and turn the building over to the incoming freshmen. It was necessary to make this change because of the ever increasing enrollment at the main building. At one time Greeley's enrollment reached nearly a thousand students. Here the freshman crosses the broad channel between grammar school and high school, and receives a pre-view of that which is to come.

Tantalizing aromas and appetizing foods — these are the things that greet you as you walk into Greeley's well organized cafeteria.

Miss Burns, with the help of library pages, takes care of the great demand for books from Greeley's well-stocked and attractive library.

Mrs. Pfingst and Miss Maxey give their understanding guidance to the newly enrolled, and, very bewildered, freshmen.

Character — Scholarship — Leadership — Service

Through all its history Lake View has attained much fame and many honors; but, not until last fall, did we gain one of the highest honors—that of becoming a member of the National Honor Society of Secondary Schools. This society is a nationwide organization, with over three thousand chapters, designed to foster the idea of training better all-around students and citizens rather than intellects. The motto of the society "C.S.L.S.", which stands for Character, Scholarship, Leadership and Service, is the basis on which the organization chooses its members.

The Executive Council consisting of Mr. A. J. Fieser, Chairman, Miss Hope Leech, Miss Conyne, and Mr. Crepin, selects the students it thinks best qualified for membership. Not more than fifteen per cent of any graduating class, ten per cent of any 4B class, and five per cent of any 3A class can become members.

Each semester the society uses an assembly period for installation exercises, and four speakers are chosen from among its ranks to give short talks on the four ideals. Following the assembly there is a tea for the members and their mothers in the social room.

In this picture of the installation ceremony, four specially chosen members are lighting the symbolic candles of the society as the four officers stand by.

Membership Rises Through P.T.A. Pages

In 1925 Mr. Perrine, who was principal at the time, realized the importance of organizing a Parent-Teacher Association at Lake View. Thus on the 18th, the 19th, and the 20th of November, Parents' Night was held to urge the parents to form this association. At the beginning of the year 1926, a small group of parents and teachers gathered for the first meeting. In the same year this small group became a member of the Illinois Congress of Parents and Teachers.

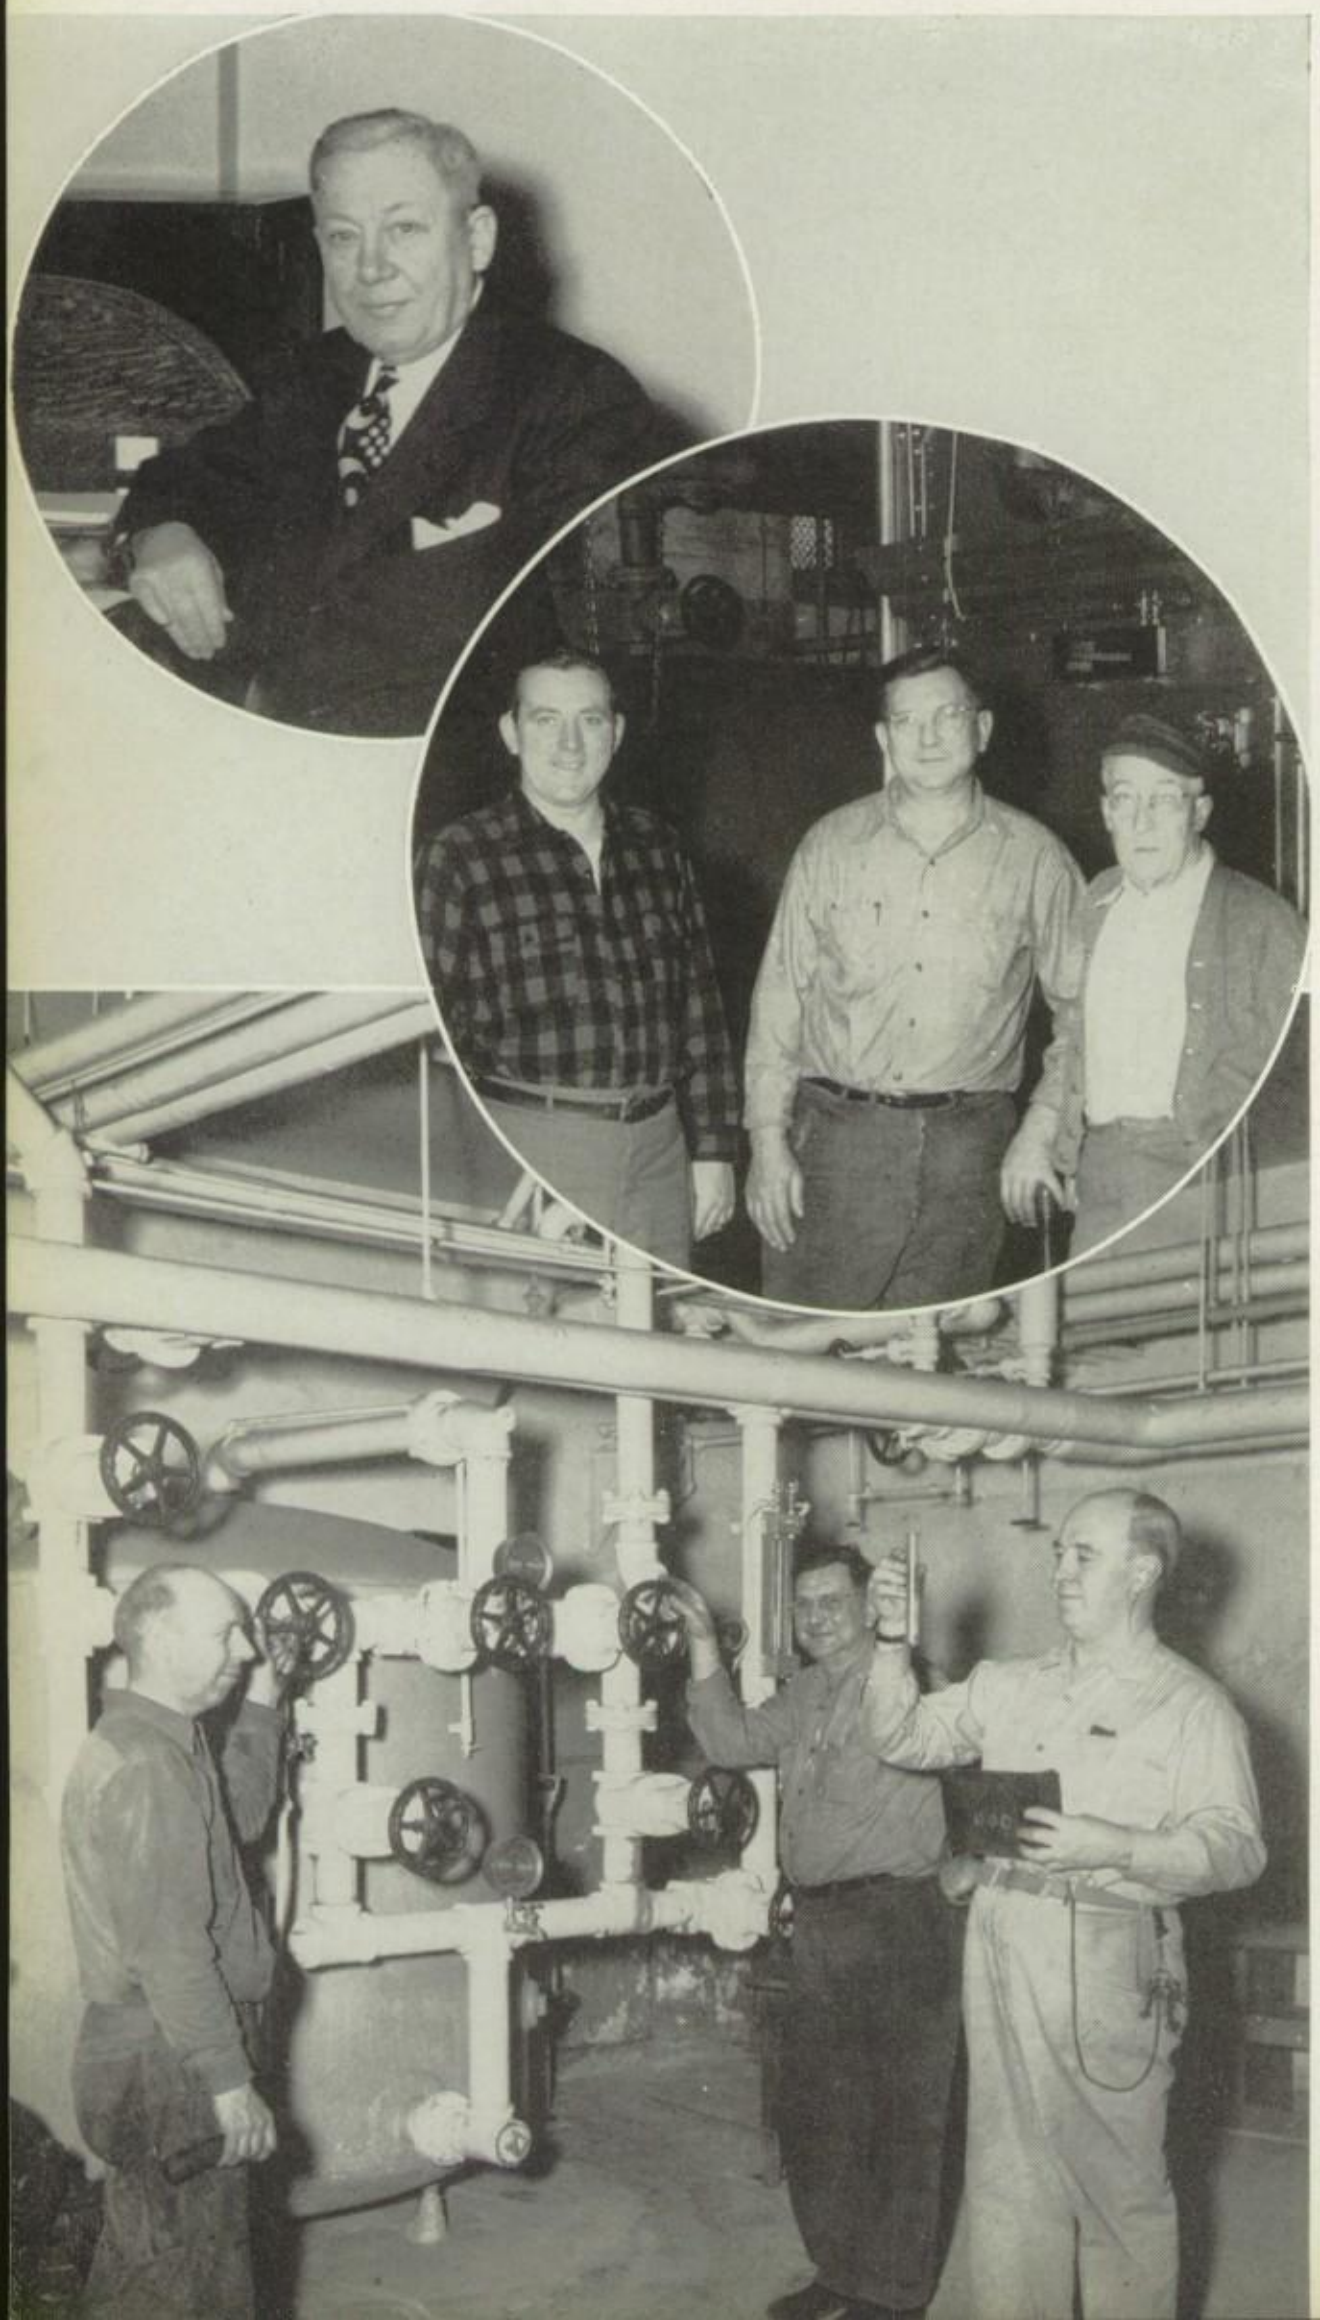
In March of 1927 the P.T.A. joined the National Congress of Parents and Teachers. When the Illinois Congress increased their dues in the spring of 1930, the P.T.A. decided it was not beneficial to pay the advanced price, and became just a Parent-Teacher Club. In 1933 this club rejoined the state Parent-Teacher Association. From the small group of parents and teachers that met in 1926 the membership had increased to 901 in 1932, and it is now well over 1500. In 1947 it was the largest organization of its kind in the state. It is through the hard work of the P.T.A. Pages that all of these memberships are obtained.

In the P.T.A.'s twenty-three years of existence it has held dances, plays, card parties and bake sales to raise money for the purchase of instruments for the Band and Orchestra, athletic equipment, and furnishings for the school. It has also helped to meet the demands of increasing aid to students. The objective of the P.T.A. is to bring into closer relation the home and the school that parents and teachers may cooperate intelligently in the training of the child.

The Hub Around Which the Wheel Turns

No building can function properly without a well organized Maintenance Department. Mr. Albin Stewart, Chief Engineer, is in charge of the physical property of Lake View. Mr. Stewart maintains the proper temperature and general upkeep of the entire school with the help of his able assistants, Mr. Luke Howe, Mr. Alex Mychalk, and Mr. William Allen, who are seen here in the boiler room, which is the central heating unit of the building.



The requisition for supplies and repairs necessary for the successful operation of the building are made with the help of Mr. Frank Steiner, Mr. Alex Mychalk, and Mr. Fred Coambs. They are pictured in the filter room where they test the chlorine content of the water that is used in the swimming pool.

A word of appreciation should also be extended to those not pictured here who put a sparkle to our school by seeing that everything is spic and span for daily use, both inside and out.

Lake View at Play

Education comes not only from books.
It is gleaned and gathered from many nooks.
Working with others,
Learning to share,
Being a part of
Many affairs—
These are the joys of school activities.

The students of old had quite a few ways
Of getting together in their days.
Picnics, excursions, plays, and dances
Were things that offered social chances.

Debates and declamations
Were never taboo;
And, if you look closely,
A club or two.
Taffy pulls, sleigh rides,
Were also in style,
And added much fun
For a long long while.

But down through the decades,
Activities have grown
To include more opportunities
Than the first pupils had known.

B.T.

Activities

A school without activities is like a colorless picture or a world void of laughter. They are the tripping words that change a provocative melody into a song; the agreeable antidote that makes study a pleasure. Activities which furnish a well-rounded social and cultural background are numerous at Lake View, offering an outlet for every student's talents and capabilities. There is a wealth of music at everyone's grasp in the Band, Orchestra, Choir, and Glee Club. A journalistic-minded person need look no farther than the LAKE reVIEW or Red and White office to find a place where he can display his ability. Concerts, clubs, assemblies, the talent shows, and many other worthwhile activities are available for the person with initiative and ability, who wants to make the most of his school life. Neither a profound scholar nor a social butterfly is an asset to society, but the rare combination of knowledge and personality is the secret formula which adds up to equal our American way of life.

Loyalty Song

We're loyal to you, Old Lake View,
Our hats off to you, Old Lake View.
A symbol you stand
For the best in the land,
We're a strong, mighty band,
Old Lake View, Rah! Rah!
You say to us, "It's up to you."
You know, then, just what we will do
We'll know no defeat, no never,
On, boys! we'll win together.
Hurrah for you, Old Lake View!

We're loyal to you, Old Lake View,
Your colors we love, Old Lake View.
The Red and the White
Cheers and thrills at the sight.
For we stand for the right,
Old Lake View, Rah! Rah!
When school days are o'er, Old Lake View
And life's work begun, Old Lake View,
We'll know no defeat, no never.
On boys, we'll win together, through
The memory of you, Old Lake View.
Chu-he-chu-ha—chu-ha-ha-ha
Chu-he-chu-ha—chu-ha-ha-ha

Hit 'em high, hit 'em low, Go team Go!
Hail to that dear old flag of Red and White!
Where it unfurls we know we'll win the fight.
For gallant sons and daughters are fighting for you,
Hearts beating for you, Oskay-Wow-Wow!
We love each nook and turret, great and small;
We'll stand by you, though nations totter and fall;
And we will answer when our country calls
For Loyalty is you, Lake View!

From Brassy Blasts to Mellow Music

The Swing Band was organized this year to furnish musical entertainment at school dances, assemblies, and the football banquet. The members of this group are: H. Kruse, R. Nielo, P. Tamm, M. Gordon, M. Bandanza, L. Dreuth, D. Mattson, B. Runnfeldt, J. Schneider, and L. Leone. At the piano is R. Spitz, and D. Hutchinson, Songstress.

Through the Lake View String Quartet the delicate beauty of Chamber Music has come to our school. It plays for the P. T. A. meetings, assemblies, and faculty parties. The members are: S. Criss, First Violin; M. Marks, Second Violin; N. Adams, 'Cello; N. Carlson, Viola.

The Hammond Organ was the gift of the February and June classes of 1939. Miss Sweet teaches those interested in playing this instrument for assemblies and extra activities. Barbara Sandberg is seated at the organ. Calvin Parker and Karin Kangas are the other organists.

99% Perseverance -- 1% Self-Assurance

Whenever there is a collection to help the needy, Lake View is always among the first to offer aid. Here is pictured a group of students returning "March of Dimes" cans, well-filled by their respective divisions. The "March of Dimes" was no exception, for every worthy cause is cheerfully supported by members of both the Lake View student body and faculty.

From time to time Lake View is asked to be host for various contests, musical or oratorical. In February Lake View was selected to hear one of the district oratorical contests sponsored by the American Legion on the subject "Our Constitution." The schools that participated were Waller, St. Clement, New Trier, Evanston Township, Senn, and Amundsen. After the contestants had given their orations, a luncheon was held for them.

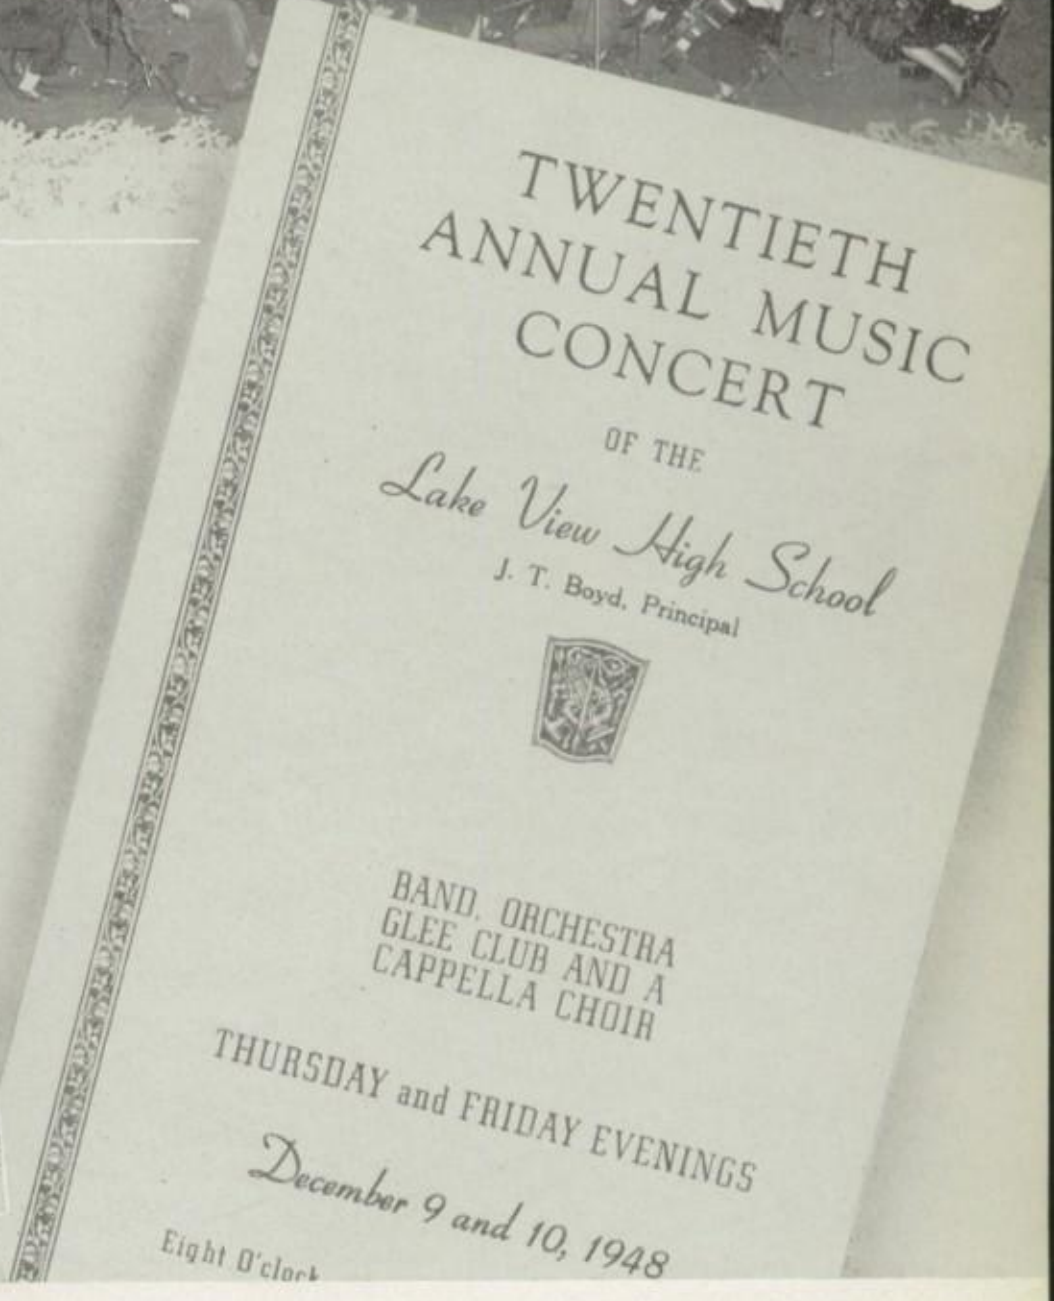
Parties given by the various clubs and organizations of the school are often educational as well as entertaining. For instance, at one of the R. O. T. C. parties some of the boys demonstrated how they can take a rifle apart and put it back together again while blindfolded.

Musicians' Delight

Every year Lake View has its annual Fall Concert in which all the talented musical organizations of the school participate. The purpose of this series is to offer the audience an enjoyable evening of outstanding music. All types of musical pieces are performed.

Here we see photographs taken at the last Fall Concert of which the grand finale was the performance of Handel's "Messiah" by the A Cappella Choir, accompanied by the Orchestra. These pictures truly portray this memorable event in all its glory.

A similar performance, the Spring Music Festival, is given in May.



The Red and White Congratulates

The Red and White was begun in the early part of the century. At that time it was a monthly publication containing poems, articles, editorials, and advertisements.

After the first World War, annuals modeled after those in the colleges were introduced into the high schools. At first Lake View did not accept the trend, but she compromised by putting out four literary magazines a semester, and, at the end of each semester, a small paper-covered issue containing pictures of the seniors, other school groups, and activities was published.

MEMBERS OF THE LITERARY STAFF:

Lake View on Her 75th Anniversary

In 1927 the monthly magazines were dropped, and only two books were put out. In a year or so these were condensed into one annual which appeared every June.

The Red and White has been successfully sponsored by Miss Hope Leech, Miss Minnie Bryne, Miss Florence Rennie, Miss Vivian Simpson, and Mrs. Katharine Burchwood.

This year, after an absence of two years, Miss Simpson is once again the sponsor of the book. Her smile, her warm chuckle, and her gay voice have enriched the pages of this book with an air of friendship and loyalty that Lake View has always been proud to call her own. We of the Red and White Literary Staff take this opportunity to thank our gracious sponsor, not only for her wise guidance, but also for the spirit of co-operation, determination, and devotion she has given us through her fine personality.

Mr. Loren T. Lucas
Business Manager

This year Mr. Loren T. Lucas kindly consented to take on the responsibility of business manager of the Red and White. He succeeded Mr. Edward Bowen who held this position for many years. Mr. Lucas has done an excellent job of handling the sales of the Red and White, for, no matter how interesting the book may be, its success depends upon the sales.

It is Miss Esther Roeth's expert guidance that has made possible the beautiful art work enhancing the pages of this book. These drawings, designed to be appropriate and attractive forewords to the various sections, set the mood of the book. Care for each detail, however small, if it adds something of value and beauty, is responsible for a finished product worthy of our highest praise. May we voice our keen appreciation of Miss Roeth and her art staff for a difficult task well done.

Members of the Art Staff are:
S. Robinson, V. Herbert, J. Tarnow, H. Immonen, D. Hume, R. Spitz, G. Gruninger, L. Matuchek, V. Lehman, J. Modloff, P. Francis, M. Williamson, M. Rosen, R. Lange.

To Remain in Our Memories Forever

Miss Grace King, the head of the Red and White Advertising Staff, has done a wonderful job this year, as she has in all years during which she has held this position. She became sponsor in February of 1944, succeeding Miss Jessie P. Hastings, who had been sponsor for eighteen years.

Twenty-nine Years of Excellent Coverage

In 1920 an ambitious group of students set before themselves a goal which was realized in October of that year—the Lake re View. Miss Winifred Davis became its first sponsor. It was a small publication selling for one cent per copy, and contained weekly information about Lake Viewites, sports, parties, and other school functions.

Time passed: the paper grew larger, and the price increased first, to two cents per copy, and then, to five cents. Miss Jane Chase, Miss Janet Jenkinson, and Mrs. Lucy McMillan were its successive sponsors. In 1930 Mrs. Iva B. Williams took it over, and guided it through its ups and downs until her retirement in 1946.

Today, under the able guidance of Mr. Louis Skolnick, the paper has taken on a new look with many novel features of interest. This past semester a new club, the Future Staff Members, was organized by Mr. Skolnick for the purpose of familiarizing the younger students with the composition of a high school paper. Meetings are held after school every other Thursday.

Mr. Skolnick also revived the subscription idea, which had been tried once before by Mrs. Williams. Instead of buying the paper for five cents each time it is issued, the students pay fifty cents at the beginning of the semester, and receive the paper bi-weekly.

"LIGHTS" out for CHAMPIONSHIP

COACH RETURNS WITH OLD PEP

The Lake View football team nearly suffered a serious setback a few weeks ago when Coach Dickerson injured his leg at practice. But the indomitable spirit of the coach could not be quenched by such a trivial matter as a "game" leg.

During the afternoon practice September, at Gunthers Park the coach was demonstrating methods of tackling. He called upon Rose, telling him to practice the tackle using himself (Dickerson) as the dummy. Now Rose zealously tackled the coach wishing to make as good an impression as possible, and forgetting that Coaches in general are only human, the unexpected resulted. When 135 pounds of "wildcat" strike a pair of legs, one or the other must give way. This time it chanced to be the legs.

Coach Dickerson's right leg was fractured just above the ankle. He was laid up for a few days but is again on the job coaching the team. The coach rides to the field in an automobile and then directs the team from a camp stool, quickly following up their movements on his crutches.

WATCH OUT ALL YE TARDY ONES

A new system has been arranged by Mr. Brown and his assistants to check up all pupils who arrive tardy or too late to report to their division rooms.

A blue card is given to the tard person immediately upon his arrival at school, when he reports in the office. This must be turned in at the close of the school day with the signatures of all his instructors.

"LIGHTS" OUT FOR CHAMPIONSHIP

"Football again and stronger than ever" is our slogan. Last year we lost the championship through a tie with Hyde Park. But we are out for it again and no tie will stop us.

Harper, Captain and Cook County quarterback, is again leading the team. Frische's place at fullback is being held by Rose who has shown himself capable for the position. Holohan and Sprenger two fast men represent the rest of the back line. Many of the old line men are back. Among these are Robinson, E. Priest, Hammer, Wild, and Rasmussen. Some of the promising new men are Tackett, Karstens, Selecman, Simonson, Bassie, and Mullendorf. The team will not average more than 135 lbs.

The first league game is tomorrow with Tilden, at Tilden. Everybody out and support the team.

GOOD PROSPECTS FOR MUSIC AT LAKE VIEW

Mrs. Smith, director of music, announces that from all appearances, Lake View Glee Clubs and Orchestra will have one of the most successful years in their history. About fifty members reported for first orchestra practice. All of the members are fairly expert and the orchestra has already started practice on some new compositions. About seventy-five boys and seventy-five girls reported for first practice in the Glee Clubs. Some old numbers were rehearsed.

By the end of this month practice will probably begin on the opera to be given in the spring. Both the Glee Clubs and Orchestra will combine in making the opera a success.

Each period of the day the halls of Lake View are patrolled by the marshals who are under the supervision of Mr. Conahan. At one time there were both hall guards and marshals, but this fall Mr. Conahan adopted a new and more efficient system, whereby we have marshals alone. These marshals try their best to see that we have undisturbed classrooms. They are also willing and able to assist students and teachers at all times. They no longer receive credit toward their diplomas, but are given honor points. This is another example of Lake View Boosters working together.

Their Enchanted Night

The Queen of the Cadet Hop, Ruth Forsquist, and her Ladies-in-Waiting: Jeanne Clarke, Dorothy Parsons, and Joyce Mack.

Cheerful! Joyous! Carefree! Gay!

Bubbling over with Christmas spirit and full of joyful anticipation, three hundred excited students dressed in stunning gowns and smartly tailored suits and uniforms, started on their merry way to the twenty-seventh annual R.O.T.C. Cadet Hop. The night was December 29, 1948; it was bitter cold and the ground was covered with ice; but these gay young people, undaunted by the weather, were on their way to the Edgewater Beach Hotel for an evening of dancing and fun to the dreamy music of Ben Sharp and his Orchestra. The dance was held in the Crystal Ballroom, and an air of happiness prevailed over all. Many students sauntered through the foyer and halls of the hotel enchanted by the numerous white reindeer, Christmas trees, tinfoil streamers, and looked wistfully at the many exquisite displays in the windows.

Destination --- The Cadet Hop!

The Grand March began at ten-thirty, after which the Queen, Ruth Forsquist, accompanied by her Ladies-in-Waiting, Joyce Mack, Jeanne Clarke and Dorothy Parsons, were crowned by Capt. Johnson. They had been chosen for this honor some weeks before by the student body. When the crowning ceremony was over, the orchestra softly played, "Let Me Call You Sweetheart" while the boys sang to their lovely "dates." The music ended at twelve P.M. Tired, but happy, everyone slowly drifted out into the night taking with them a wonderful memory.

A Peek into the Future

Purdue? Northwestern? Illinois?

These names, which mean very little to the freshmen or sophomores, hold a great deal of importance for the seniors. As the students in their last year of high school at Lake View near their goal, they begin to wonder and form many questions in their minds about the not too distant future. College Day helps to answer some of these questions. Once a year representatives from many colleges and universities spend the day here interviewing students.

College Day was inaugurated in Lake View in the middle thirties. This tradition had to be discontinued during the war, but it has been reëstablished this year.

Hail and Farewell!

After the First World War, a great current swept throughout the world for greater and purer democracy. This movement was felt even at Lake View, and in 1921 the Student Commission was inaugurated. This Commission consisted of a President, Vice-President, Secretary, Social Chairman, Business Manager, and Sergeant-at-arms, all elected by direct student vote. Each semester an assembly was held during which the candidates presented their views to the student-body. The Commission conducted the students' affairs in co-operation with the various Student-year Councils and the Senate.

For many years the Commission was ably and wisely directed by Mr. Edward Bowen. When Mr. Bowen took a sabbatical leave in the fall of 1946, Mr. John Beckerman took charge until the Spring of 1948, when he left to become an elementary school principal. This past fall it was decided to change the system, and do away with the Commission.

These young people represent our last Commission. They are: Thomas Dacy, President; Thomas Richards, Vice-President; Norman Gleit, Sergeant-at-Arms; Ruth Forsquist, Secretary; Ana Ishikawa, Business Manager; Jerre Jean Gorman, Social Chairman.

Tradition Gives Way

This fall a new system of Student Government was inaugurated by Dr. Brown. It was thought that a more democratic organization should be adopted. In order that the division should be an integral part of the school, each home-room is organized as follows: A Chairman, Vice-Chairman, Secretary, and Financial Officer are chosen to carry on the business affairs of their room, and become members of a council representing each year. The Freshmen, Sophomore, Junior, and Senior Councils then elect four officers from each group to represent their class on the All-School Council. Therefore, the All-School Council consists of sixteen members, and decides important matters concerning the whole school.

A Tradition in the Making —

As occasions are enacted over and over again, they eventually become traditions. There must be an origin, however, to each one, and that is just what we hope our beautiful "May Festival" was on May 18. This delightful program for all girls of Lake View and Greeley and their mothers contained intricate dances, special gymnastics, songs, and finally the presentation of the May Queen and her court. Girls in pastel gowns, soft lighting, and a solemn ceremony accompanied the crowning of Miss Beverly Morton by Miss Fran Allison.

— Our First May Festival

The May Festival and the choosing of a May Queen is to take the place of the former Cadet Hop Queen and Miss Lake View. This lovely program, sponsored by the Girls' Athletic Association, is hoped and expected to become a Lake View tradition.

Ancient Pastimes Live Again

This is a scene from the annual Roman Banquet, held every spring for Latin students, which has become a tradition at Lake View.

This is the speakers' table at the Roman Banquet.

The officers of the Latin Club for the fall semester are: M. Meltzer, Consul; D. Mann, Praetor; H. Rubenstein, Aedile; K. Zimmerman, Quaestor; D. Gordon, Aedile; Miss T. Louise Viehoff, Sponsor and Tribune; J. Clark, Aedile; J. Render, Consul.

The Latin Club:

Fiedler, J. Fiedler, D. Fisher, J. Smythe, J. Burgess.

The Latin Club was begun so that students in the Latin department might learn how the Romans lived, worked, and played. The club meets once a week. The officers are: two consuls, who preside at alternate meetings; a praetor, who keeps the minutes; a quaestor or treasurer; and two aediles who prepare the entertainment for each meeting. Each year a Roman Banquet is given at which all appear in Roman garb. The guest speaker is always someone who is an authority on classical subjects.

The whirl of the baton, the click of their heels, and their bright Red and White uniforms bring to the fore the spirit of Lake View.

The Majorettes are:
Lois Dunston, Gerry Gruen, Loretta Lowe, Diane Baxter, and Sandra Colby.

Lake View — Ever Ready To Serve

CIVIC YOUTH GROUP

When the community called for aid in establishing a new youth center in our vicinity, Lake View, as always, was ready to do her part. Understanding this pressing problem Larry Silverman, Ronald Smith, Frank Paz, Charlotte Herlinger, Ruth Forsquist, and Betty Riley actively engaged in organizing the Uptown Edgewater Teen-Age Center. This center was formally opened on Monday, April 18, 1949.

CLEAN-UP COMMITTEE

It has been customary for many years for Lake View to be active in the yearly Clean-Up Campaign. In cooperation with the city-wide project we have managed to do our best year after year. Representing us this year were Harvey Miller, Frank Paz, Karl Berolzheimer, Charlotte Herlinger, Audrey Weil, and Miss E. Taurog as sponsor.

Each year this group undertakes to carry out those projects which are now needed. This year, with Miss Walters as sponsor, they undertook the sending of Christmas boxes to Europe.

Visual Education was introduced into Lake View before the Second World War. Under the supervision of Mr. Alfred Crepin educational films are shown which supplement book-learning in many of our courses.

Once a Year Lake View Struts Her Talent

On January 14 at eight o'clock the filled assembly hall was stilled as the Fourth Annual Talent Show was about to begin. At this affair hidden accomplishments among Lake View students are discovered. The judges, leading people in the theatrical world, attend to find budding artists and award prizes in order to encourage further endeavor.

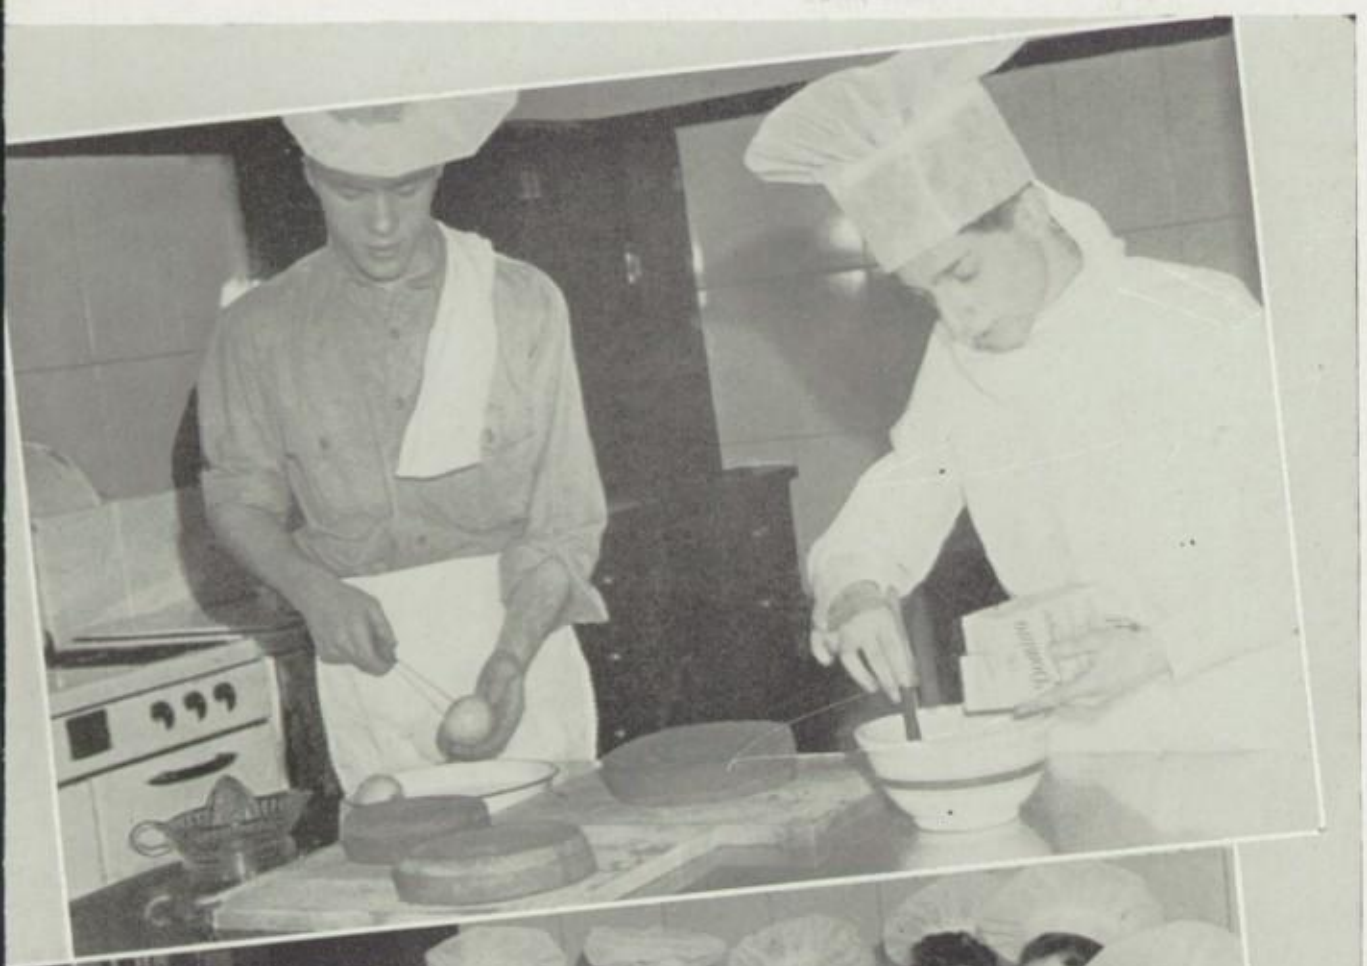
Contestants for title of "Miss Lake View"

In the Musical and Culinary Arts



Vivian Rollison was awarded the title of "Miss Lake View"; Berenice Simkus and Marlena Volkers were chosen as her attendants. They were selected from fourteen candidates. "Miss Lake View" received a full scholarship to the Patricia Vance Modeling School, and the attendants received half-scholarships.

An outstanding feature of the Talent Show has become the making and baking of a cake by each contestant. This year's cooking contest winner was Elaine Thompson. She was awarded a scholarship to the Pope Cooking School by Mr. Pope, the judge of the contest. The runner-ups were awarded cookbooks.

These pictures illustrate the various steps in the preparation for the contest. Those taking part are: E. Thompson, B. Smith, V. Rennick, D. Stamm, V. Wheeler, E. Rogers, C. Herzog, J. Atlas, M. Beck, N. Bastian, A. Beck.

Serving the teachers, being hostesses at banquets, and offering service at school functions are a few of the ways in which the Lake View Senior Service girls fulfill their duties.

These select girls are chosen every semester from the 4B class to stand as a symbol of honor and loyalty to the school. Only those girls with enthusiasm, ability, and willingness are accepted into this group which has so rapidly become a tradition in Lake View's history.

Yesteryear and Always

Sportsmanship,
Honor,
Team-work in gym,
Strong muscles,
Healthy bodies,
Vitality, and vim—
Are these the things that make a team win?

Our boys and girls have often shown
What so many people have always known:
That playing fair with fair play
Is always playing in the right way.

So, from the rise of athletic events
With football and track as the first tournaments,
With baseball and soccer soon following the way,
And the girls of '25 forming the G. A. A.,
Down through swimming, golf, basketball, and bowling,
We have come a long way, every class knowing
That:

Sportsmanship,
Honor,
Team-work in gym,
Strong muscles,
Healthy bodies,
Vitality, and vim—
These are the things that make a team win!

Athletics

A football flies across a muddy field; a basketball slips neatly, smoothly through its hoop amid boisterous cheers; an expert swift swimmer leaves a little trail of disturbed water behind him as he pushes across a wide pool; and once more the ever-growing athletic course has made its influence felt in the life of the school. This well-organized physical education department, which includes all students who are physically able, has progressed from the days when boys and girls received their only exercise during the long hike they made every day across the prairie that stretched between their homes and school. In the growth of Lake View's athletics from that time to this, there have been many spasmodic bursts of activity, when such things as the Girls' Shinny Club, the Tennis Club, and courses in fencing and golf were added for a short while. They have fallen by the wayside, but the strong, firm core around which they were built—athletics, itself—remains to offer every student the opportunity to make for himself "A strong mind in a strong body."

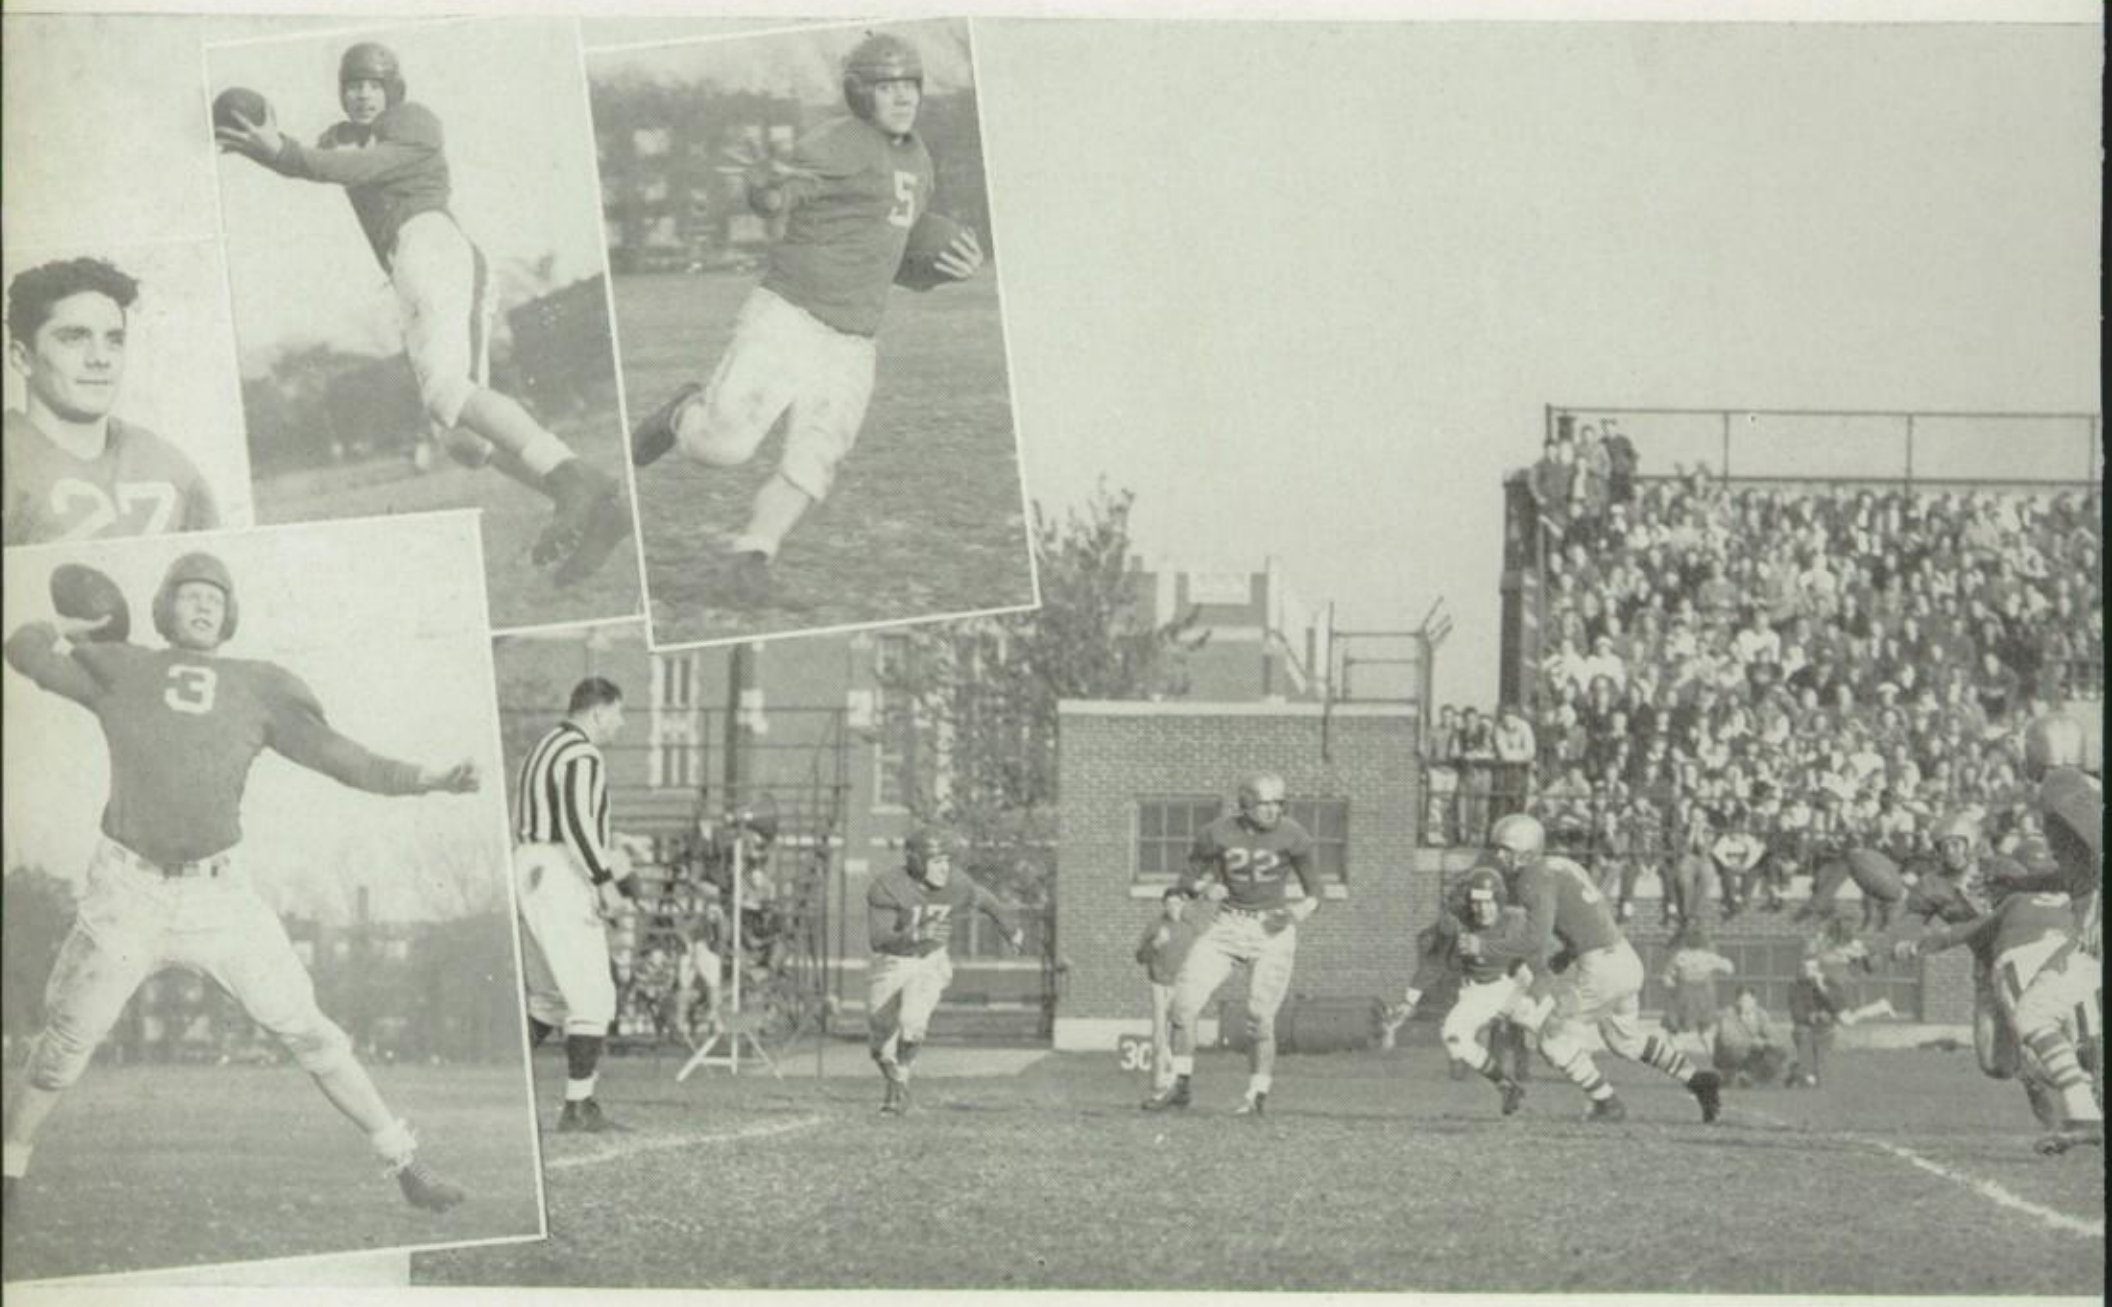
"On, Boys! We'll Win Together"

From the beginning kick-off to the last plunge into the line, Lake View football games have provided solid packed sessions of thrills and spills. The afternoons watching the games never will be forgotten. No one will ever forget the half times, the marching band, and the majorettes, nor the singing of the Loyalty song, letting the boys know they have our support—win, lose, or draw.

Football has been a competitive sport in the Chicago high school system since is consisted of two schools, each representing a section. The big turn-out of the year was for the meeting of George Steffens and Walter Eckersoll, stars of the North and the South sides, respectively. Then Lake View High School was not a part of the Chicago system, because the community was a separate township. Lake View teams on the gridiron can be traced back some sixty years.

Let's Cheer for the Wildcats--



Clockwise:

Bob Johnson, Quarterback

Joe Martarano, Halfback

Bob Hoffman, End

Bill Allen, Fullback

The student body has not changed much in the many years. Yes, the hot rod has replaced the bicycle built for two; the peacoat, the raccoon one; but the spirit and never-die attitude has continued on to the present day. We realize that the boys put their heart and soul into the game, and cheer them on to victory; never admitting defeat.

Lake View's football teams have been well coached throughout the years by Mr. Coe, a science teacher who was retired last year; Mr. Dickerson, who is the present basketball coach; Mr. Thompson, who transferred to Steinmetz; and Mr. Frieda,

They're Our Boys!

Clockwise:
Tom Walker, Halfback
Dick Kornatz, Tackle
Bill Bryden, Guard
Jack Acey, Center

who has been coach since 1935. This fall Mr. Frieda resigned to devote his time to developing the track team. He has been popular with the boys, and he has contributed much to the slogan "Play Fair—Fair Play."

Mr. Solem and Mr. Conahan were asked to take over the coaching, and to put into practice a year round training program. The boys during the winter months attend a special "gym" period where they are conditioned. When the weather permits, the boys will bite the dust during four weeks of spring practice. Yes, it is a hard struggle to the top, but we are on the way. We wish the new combination of coaches the best of luck and a winning team.

Some of the pictures in this section are of the thrilling game with Taft. The picture with Amundsen High School in the background shows Bill Allen picking up some necessary yardage. With "Old Glory" in the background the good sportsmanship and fair play at all Lake View games is illustrated. Coach Frieda is shown giving some last-minute instructions to players, W. Allen, W. Bryden, and R. Kornatz, before the game. Taft player, in the lower right hand picture, is in the clear at the moment, but he is soon to be stopped by the Wildcats.

Lake View Takes on a New Look!

The moment was coming; there was an air of expectancy; Lake View's one hundred twenty-five fighting Wildcats were ready to charge the line. The water-boy was prepared; his big moment had come; spring practice had begun.

The big turn-out for football this year gives promise of a winning team. The efforts of Mr. Solem and Mr. Conahan have inspired the team with a determination to succeed. The new coaches have planned a three-year program, which is built upon the younger boys of the school, new equipment, and renewed energy on the part of all. Considering that this is the first time such a program is to be used, it cannot be expected that the team will win a city championship next year. An official statement from one of the coaches assures us of a fighting team, which, in spring practice, boosted the sale of ointment and bandages.

Lake View's baseball team is off to a fine start. As the Red and White is about to go to press, the team has a record of five wins and three losses to this date. Lake View has always had a baseball team. For the past number of years Mr. Dickerson has ably coached the team; and, because of his coaching, all of his teams have been respected on the North Side diamonds for their good sportsmanship and general atttitude.

The last city championship was won in 1918. Past teams have qualified for the quarter finals some ten or fifteen times; the present team being in third place at the moment. The prospects for next year's team are encouraging, although some players will be lost. In the future Coach Dickerson will devote his time to baseball alone, and hopes to build up a superior team.

Minor Sports Play a Major Part

Beside the highly regarded football and basketball teams, Lake View is well represented in baseball, swimming, track, and tennis. In the past, there have been soccer, crew, and fencing teams at Lake View. The present day teams have won respect, following the tradition of fair play and sportsmanship.

"Baskets — Baskets — Baskets — Boys"

For many years Lake View has been well represented in the tough competition offered by the teams in the North Section. The Junior and Senior basketball teams are under the able guidance of Mr. Guy L. Dickerson, who steers with a stern and experienced hand. When this season came to an end, the Senior and Junior teams finished second and third, respectively. Past teams have also set fine records, and Lake View has even appeared in a state tournament.

A long session of practice turns out well-rounded teams, working together as one. The teams work with clock-like precision, dribbling, passing, and scoring. They always play a top grade game of defense, never missing a chance to steal the ball, and taking it down the court to lay it up for two points. The teams take advantage of all the breaks, taking care to make all free shots.

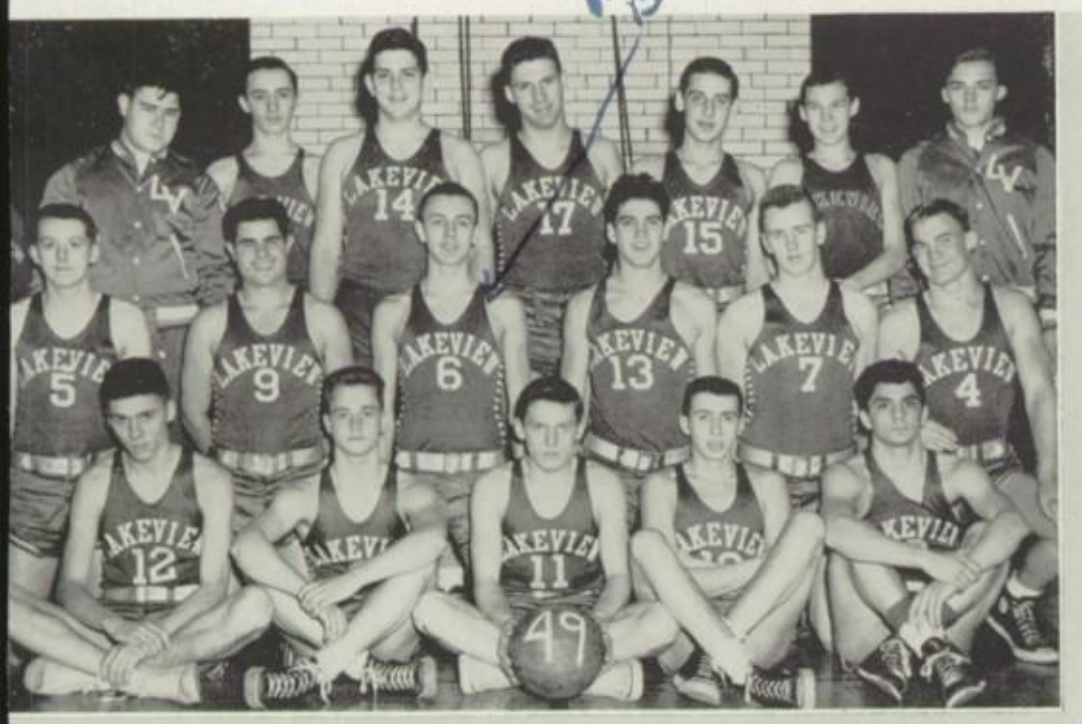
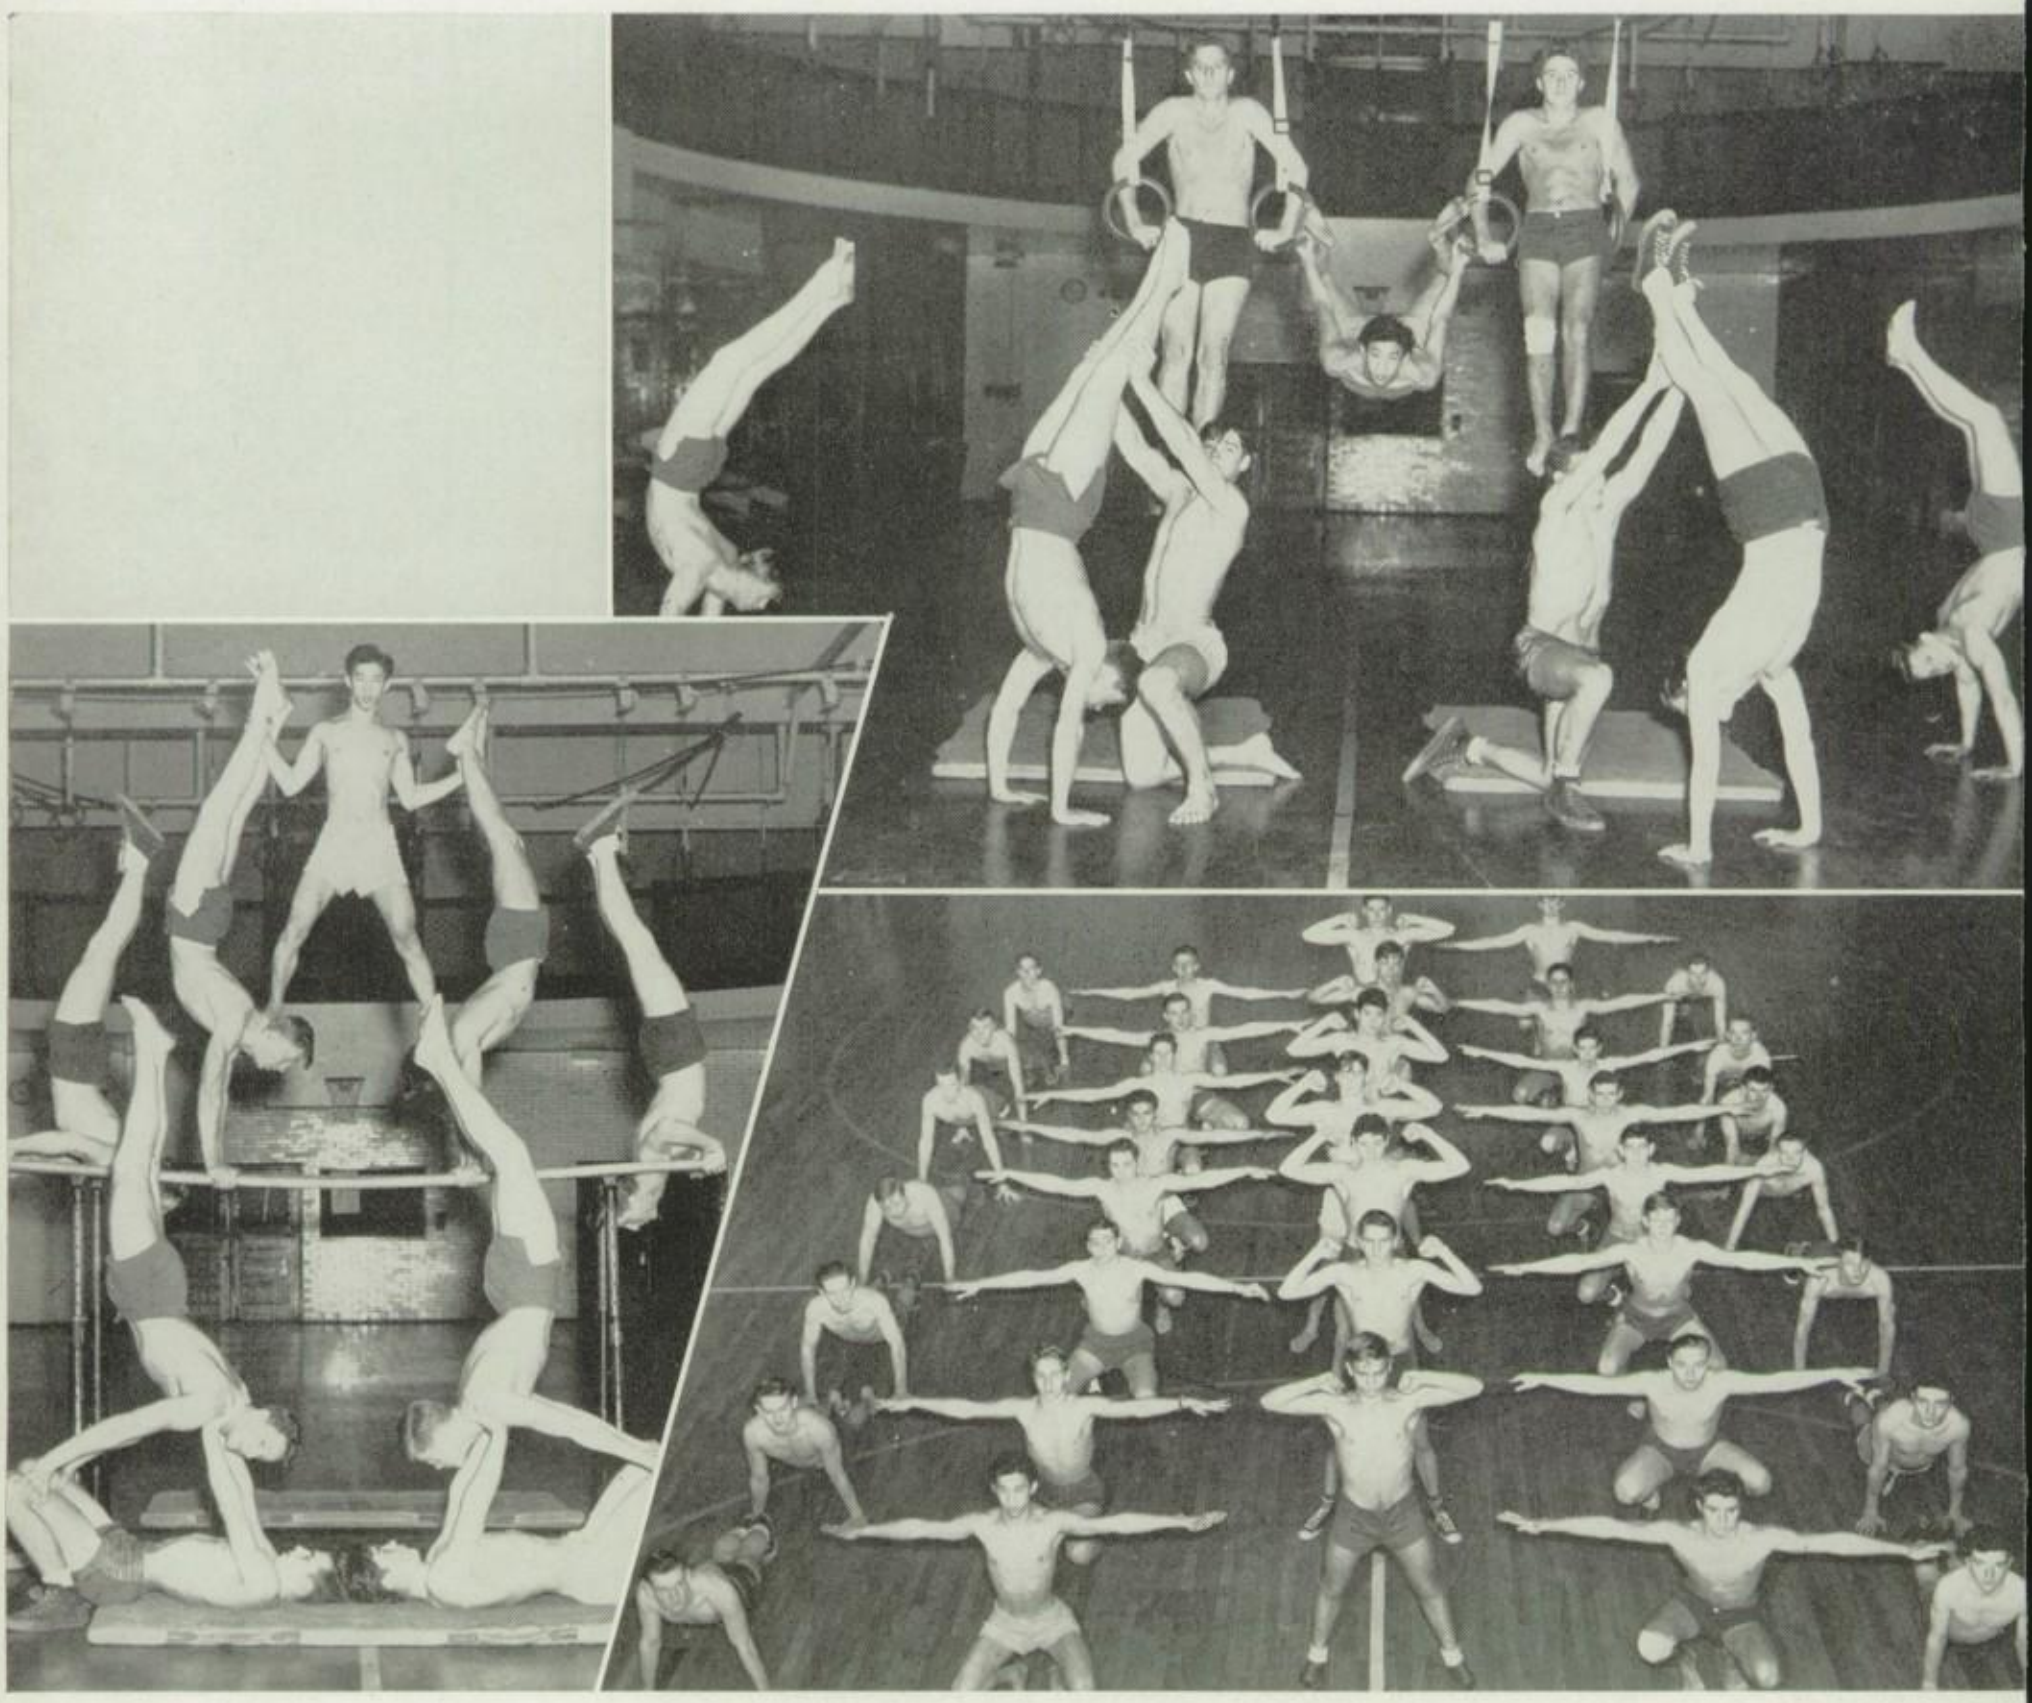
There is always a large turn-out of students, because the games are close and hard-fought. The supporting students are enthusiastic and are eager to cheer the boys on, win or lose. The pictures from the Von Steuben and Senn games in this section are examples of the thrilling games witnessed by loyal Lake Viewites.



Health is Wealth



Physical education in Lake View dates back to 1886, when Mr. Emil Groener was head of the department. The value of this course cannot be estimated in dollars and cents. A healthy body is the greatest asset a person can hope for in life. The physical education department offers the chance to acquire physical fitness; once attained, it cannot be taken away from an individual. The Rangers and Leaders' Class, under Mr. Rothe, are fine examples of physical perfection, gained by hard training and encouraged spirit. Leaders—(On Rings and On Parallel Bars) E. Carlston, J. Fischer, R. Garber, E. Larsen, J. Rohde, D. Smith, R. Smith, J. Takehara, H. Vogel.

The Nucleus of Our Athletic Programs

Since 1925, the girls of Lake View have had many opportunities to be recognized for their accomplishments in athletic activities. It was in that year that the Chicago Board of Education introduced the Girls' Athletic Association to the public high schools. Lake View, along with many others, immediately established an affiliation, which has expanded throughout the years until it has reached the one hundred percent mark in membership. The splendid achievement of the G. A. A. is inspired by the guidance of a former graduate, Mrs. Ethel Emrich Clauson.

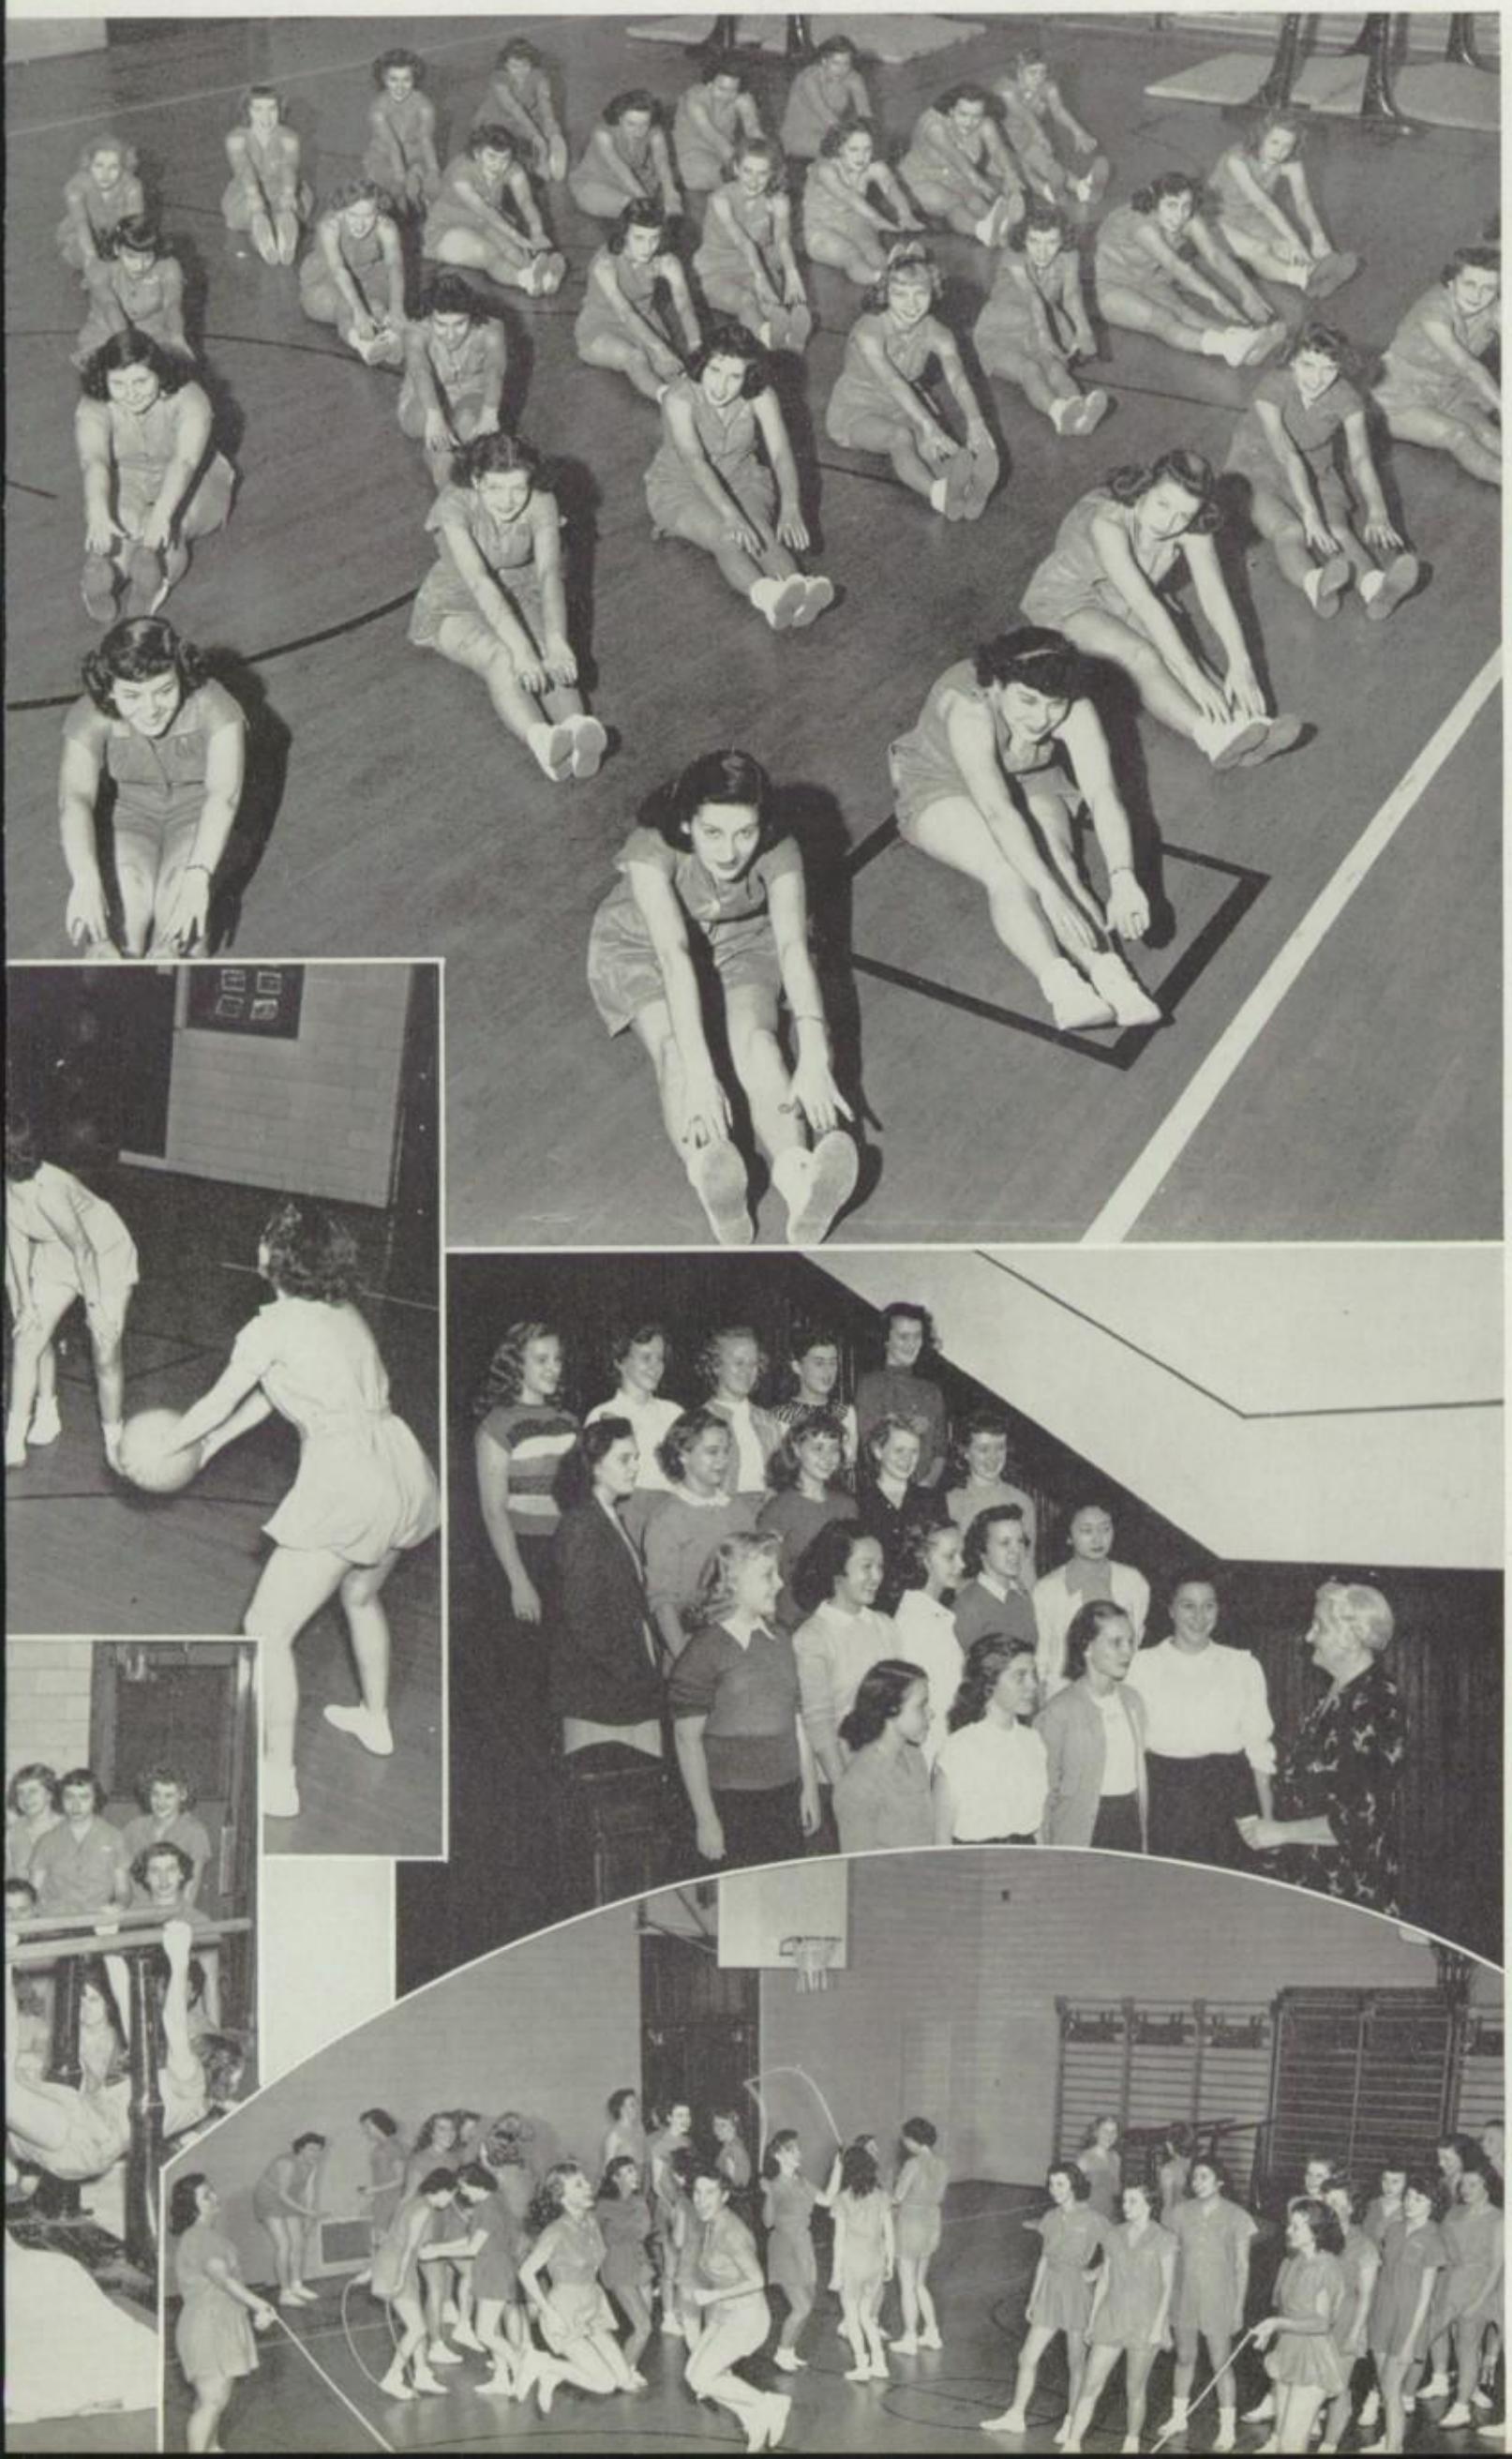
Grace, Attractiveness, and Agility

Gone are the days of the middy blouse and bloomers. Even as the style of our "gym" clothes has changed, so has the standard of our "gym" requirements. At the first introduction to physical education in 1912, following the establishment of a fine gymnasium, our girls were allowed to use that room only twice a week. A well-rounded program was arranged due to the untiring and matchless work of Miss Lenore Suder, a Lake View graduate. In 1936, however, a new rule, stating that each girl was to have the use of "gym" facilities five days per week, was enforced.

During both wars an astounding discovery was made concerning the health of our young men and women. The evidence pointed to a lack of health education. This new course was readily injected into the physical education curriculum at Lake View.

The Splash and Halloween Parties shown here are typical activities sponsored by our hardworking G. A. A. Board.

Are Acquired By Our Girls



Conditioning exercises limber the girls for further apparatus work.

The Greeley G. A. A., under the able leadership of Miss Muhs, plans activities for the Freshmen girls similar to those sponsored by the Lake View G. A. A.

The Board consists of:

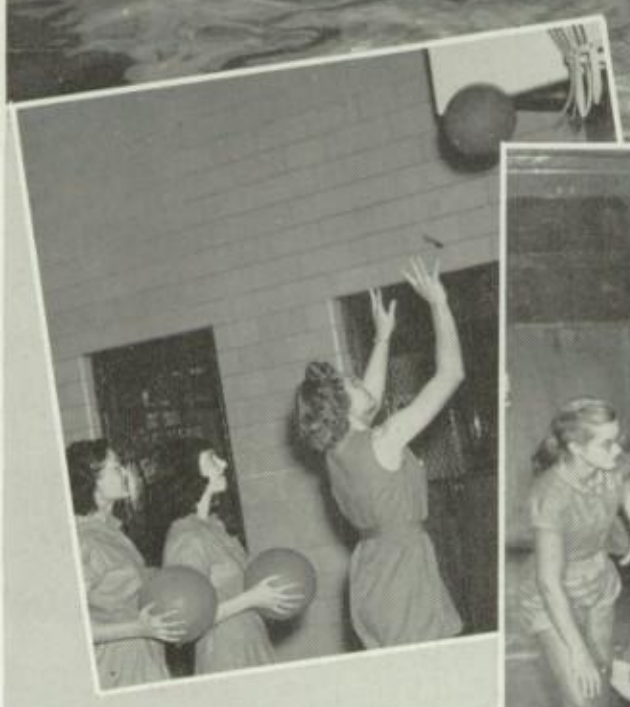
Row 2: M. Olson, S. Ishikawa, B. Altemeier, H. Thomas, N. Takamatsu.

Row 3: P. Burns, M. Mackey, P. Carol, M. Anderson, B. Lord.

Row 4: B. Johnson, L. Halloran, S. Holmquist, M. Lucas, I. Bokor.

In Dancing Routines, Swimming Lessons,



Captain basketball, as shown here, is one of the favorite team games of the girls. Speed, quick thinking, and concentration are necessary to excel in this sport.

And Physical Fitness Exercises

In addition to the various games and skills learned in "gym" classes, the importance of swimming for health is stressed. Even the most frightened beginner eventually loses her fear of the water, and finds enjoyment in splashing about the pool. The fact that a passing grade in swimming is required for graduation is another element which encourages the beginner.

The swimmer of yesterday becomes the graceful dancer of today in the spacious expanse provided for such frivolity. The type of dancing shown is a simple folk dance, characteristic of the routines taught which improve the coordination of the girls.

Maybe not quite as interesting as dancing, workouts on the rings and high-jumping are all-important to retain healthful "girlish figures."

Serving Our School and Our Country

1920 — 1949

It was in 1920 that the Lake View Reserve Officers' Training Corps was first organized. Through the years, our R. O. T. C. has made a record, which few schools can equal. From the unit's inception until the war Lake View was an honor school every year, but one, 1929. Twice, in 1925 and 1937, the R. O. T. C. was the Sixth Corps Area champion, leading over sixty high schools in Illinois, Wisconsin, and Michigan. In 1935 they placed second in the corps area.

In 1936 Lake View had the champion rifle team in the 75th corps area. For six years we scored the highest among the high schools of Chicago. For three consecutive years it won first place in the platoon competition in Chicago, and took second place in 1929 and 1930. Lake View has had the ONLY R. O. T. C. unit which has ever scored 100 out of a possible 100 in platoon competition, a perfect score! This amazing feat was accomplished in 1926.

This illustrious record was realized through the diligence and work of Sergeant Lee, who came to Chicago and built our school's R. O. T. C. In 1946, Sergeant Lee retired, leaving behind him an amazing and fruitful career. His command was taken over by Sergeant Duttko, who subsequently retired, and now the R. O. T. C. is led by serious, smart Captain Johnston and whimsical, humorous Sergeant Cihos. Lake View has regained its honor school rating, and we shall go on to new heights and break old records.

The National Rifle Association has been developed to bring out those qualities of sportsmanship, fair play, self-control, and co-operation so essential to success in life.

This year the Reserve Officers' Training Corps decided to have each company elect an honorary member from the fair sex. Mrs. Topping is the Sponsor and Honorary Major.

They Add Glamour to a Game!

They are: C. Anderson, E. Aslandes, N. Bastian, S. Birk, M. Bowen, J. Clarke, M. DeVito, D. Fischer, R. Forsquist, A. Francis, P. Francis, M. Fuentes, P. Garber, J. Gorman, L. Grossman, C. Hagler, L. Shaffer, C. Spade, M. Tallackson, J. Tarnow, J. Thomas, M. Thompson, M. Vogel, G. Wesling, F. Woodard.

Imagine a game without cheerleaders! Their enthusiasm, spontaneous vitality, and rousing cheers not only encourage the team, but also the crowd. At one time boys also took part in this activity, but in the early thirties the boys began to drop out, and since then, the group has consisted of only girls. These most loyal and enthusiastic cheerleaders have become the spark which ignites the flame in the eyes of our teams and their supporters.

One Backward Glance

Marching to "Pomp and Circumstance,"
Wearing a most proud smile,
Our seniors, in their caps and gowns,
Proceed down the aisle.

Let us reflect on the days of yore.
How were the seniors in years before?
What did they wear?
What thoughts did they share?
How large were the classes that passed through this door?

At first, the girls wore satins and lace
And carried bouquets in their arms,
The boys appeared in formal dress;
Both bringing out old-fashioned charms.

Declamations were made by each senior, at first,
Then they were decreased to six.
The subjects they chose quenched knowledge's thirst,
And helped learning and culture to mix.

Later, white dresses
With red belts and ties,
Were set as the school's tradition.
They denoted the colors
Which Lake View held high
As she sent them forth on their mission.

At last came the era
Which introduced
The famous cap and gown.
With the increase in size
Of successive classes,
It was practical, and won world renown.

But now we notice,
As they pass,
They, too, brush a tear from an eye.
A wavering voice,
A catch of breath,
In memory of things gone by.

Yes, marching to "Pomp and Circumstance,"
Wearing a most proud smile,
Our seniors, in their caps and gowns,
Proceed down the aisle.

Seniors

There was once a legend that told of a miraculous Fountain of Youth; and, although today's many cynics deny its existence, the wise and probing know it can be found. In a school, for instance, there is never a Senior who has not sipped enough of the enchanted nectar to bear its strange effect. He leaves his childhood behind him, but does not quite put on a cloak of maturity. He is held for a precious few seconds in the aura of a translucent mist when what's ahead of him is not discernible, and what's past is a dream not quite remembered. His imagination, ideals, and undaunted heart can reach up to the stars, for nothing is unconquerable then—no aspiration too high, no image too lofty to imitate. Certainly, some mysterious potion must be working its effect then! Some enchanted drops have trickled down to an unwary soul, casting a lovely, too soon broken, spell. And you who laugh derisively as you read this—perhaps, someday, you will realize that Youth, itself, is the name of the pure, priceless water welling up eternally from a deep, secret Spring of Time.

LAKE VIEW HIGH SCHOOL • CHICAGO

Commencement

Saying good-bye: to an old brick building, to a tin locker, to a chalky class room.

Saying good-bye: to a friendly library, a vigorous gymnasium, a pulsating assembly hall, a soft-footed office.

Saying good-bye: to the many gaited halls, to capricious fountains, to hand-polished banisters.

Saying good-bye: to a teacher, to a friend, to a club, to a small world.

Saying good-bye: with high happy laughter and treacherous sighs.

Saying good-bye: to all this; but taking with us memories, contacts, hopes and ideals.

Saying good-bye: to the shell but taking with us the soul.

With a smile, and yet wise firmness, Miss Irmagarde B. Leach, our gracious Senior Sponsor, guides each graduating class along a smooth happy course to that important occasion —Commencement. Her keen sense of humor, her thoughtfulness, and her understanding of our individual problems win unanimous admiration and respect. To this fine person each Senior should offer a sincere "Thank you!"

The last semester at Lake View is filled with many diversified interests, all centered at school. The Senior class is so organized as to take care of all these activities. The five officers, who are chosen by the entire class, and the council which represents the divisions, choose the committees. These committees with the help of the council plan the prom, the luncheon, the weekly programs, and choose the class gift.

The program committee has just recently been added to plan the wonderful senior assemblies that enable the seniors to meet together and enjoy themselves, and also discuss the problems at hand.

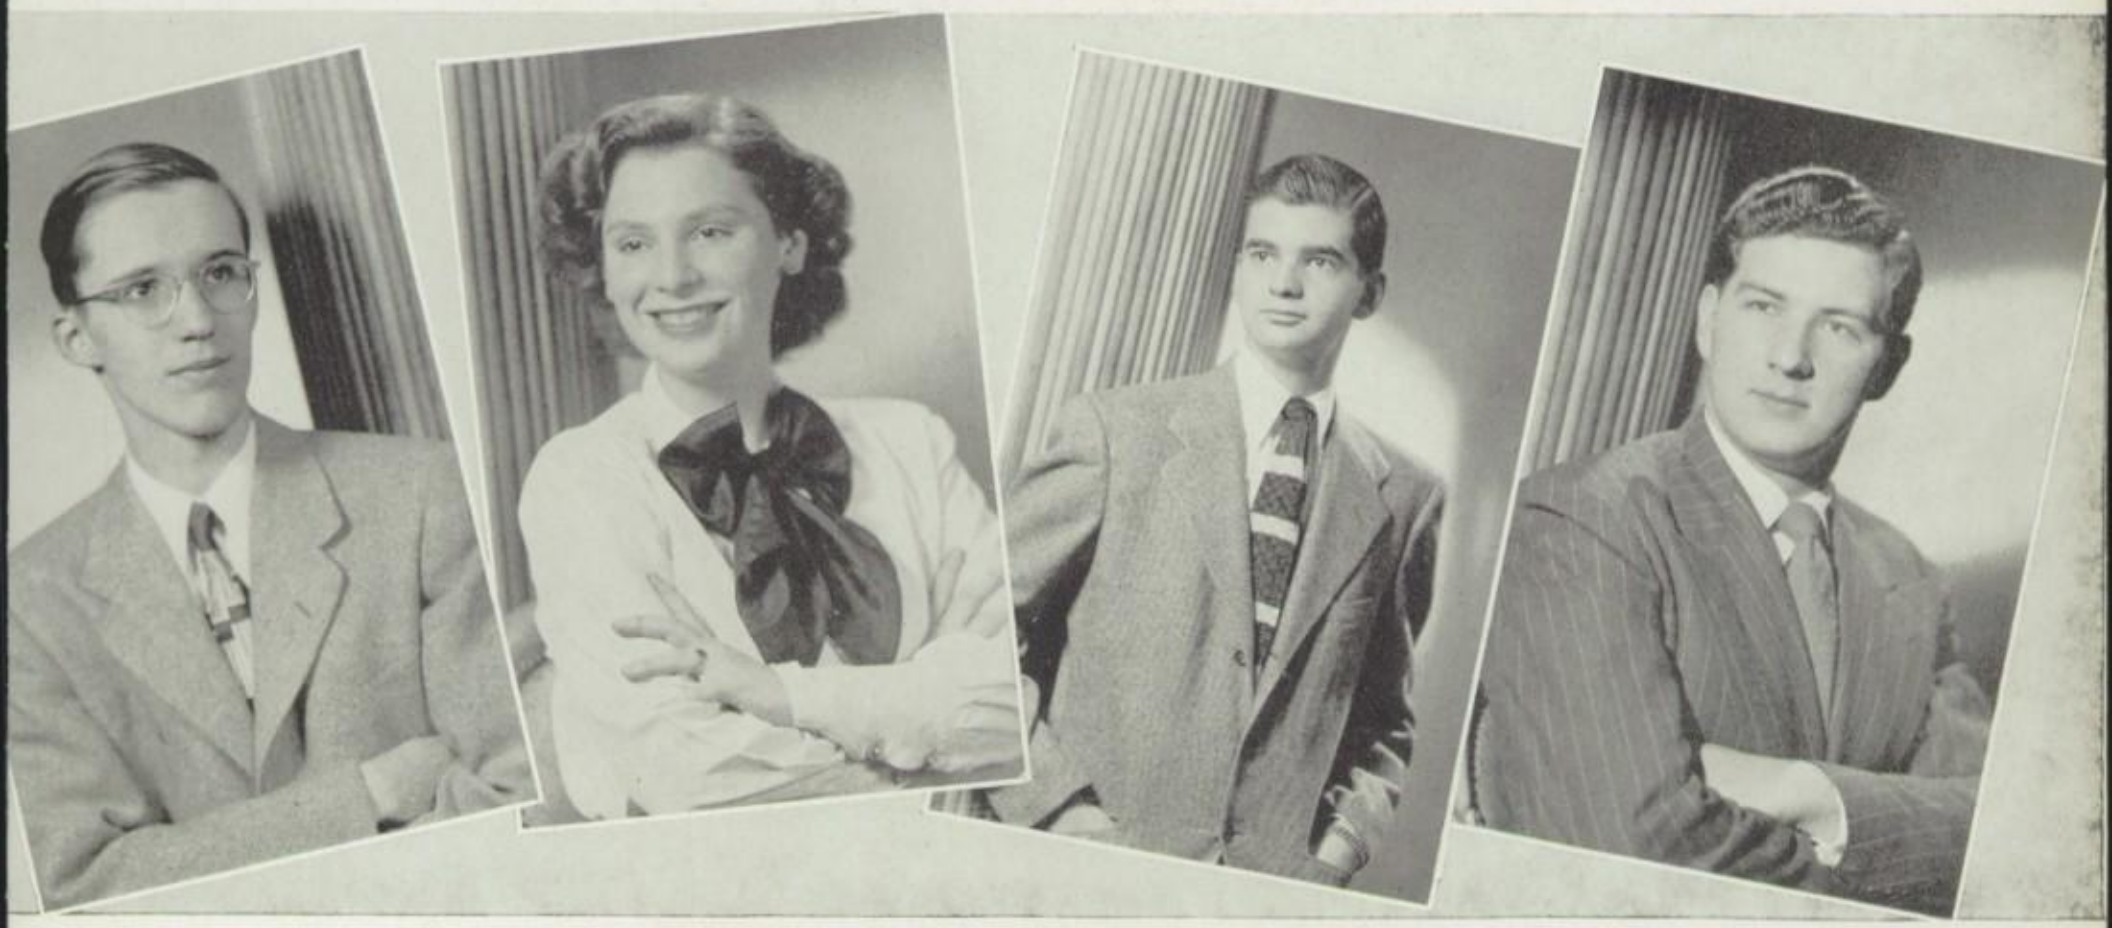
Our Oldest Tradition — Class Speakers



ymond Norstrand | Marilyn Meltzer | Donald Gold | John Render

Since the first graduation in 1876, one of the most outstanding and deep-rooted traditions in Lake View is the custom of having members of the graduating classes deliver the commencement addresses. In the earliest days of our school's existence, when the graduating classes were small, every member gave a thesis of one thousand words on any subject he chose. As the school grew and there were more graduates, the Commencement Exercises stretched over two nights to enable everyone to present his speech. Soon it became impossible to continue this procedure, and the seniors chose six speakers for the graduation exercises. These included the two top-ranking graduates, two chosen by the faculty, and two chosen by the class itself. Today there are only four speakers consisting of the valedictorian, salutatorian, one faculty selection, and one class choice. A general topic is decided upon by this group, and each speaker gives a discourse on a certain phase or outlook of this theme.

The topic of the January, 1949, class was "A Tribute to Lake View". John Render, Valedictorian, spoke on "Peace among Ourselves"; Raymond Nordstrand, Salutatorian, chose as his topic "Challenges and Goals"; Marilyn Meltzer, Faculty Choice, gave a talk entitled "Learning through Lake View"; and Donald Gold, Class Choice, called his speech "Parallels in Progress".

The speakers for the June Commencement were chosen as we went to press, but their general theme has not been selected. They are: Nancy Wonisch, Valedictorian, Shirley Neumer, Salutatorian, Charlotte Barnett, Faculty Choice, and Francis X. Paz, Class Choice.

Orchids and Swishing Skirts

On the night of January 21, 1949, the happy and excited seniors danced the night away at that most memorable evening in their high school careers—the Senior Promenade. It took place in the beautiful oval ballroom of the Sovereign Hotel where the joyful anticipation of the last three and one-half years was finally realized.

Commands Gallantry for a Night

The billowy formals and the exquisite corsages could not outshine the starry expression in the eyes of the girls. Their night of enchantment was enhanced by the superb melodies played by a Lew Diamond Band.

From the receiving of the bid to the gala climax marked by the Grand March, the evening was full of romantic thoughts and gay young laughter. It came to a close with the echoes of "Let Me Call you Sweetheart" and the Seniors bade farewell, and went their separate ways.

A Gala Affair

The Senior Luncheon is one of the highlights of our last semester. The mid-year graduates held their luncheon in the Michigan Room of the Edgewater Beach Hotel on January 25, 1949. Overnight they seemed to blossom forth into mature, well-mannered young men and women. A spirit of gaiety prevailed on this—their last informal gathering. A well-planned program laden with student talent made the afternoon a delightful and long-to-be-remembered affair for all who attended.

Lake View Hymn

All hail to thee, dear
Alma Mater,
To thee our voices rise
in praise;
To thee whose guiding light
has led us
Through scores of bright and happy days.
Our hymn shall ever tell the story
Of honor fair and beauty
true,
Of precepts high that thou
has taught us;
All hail to thee,
Lake View.

Though far our wand'ring
paths may lead us,
Or life's work call to
distant clime,
To thee our thoughts shall ever carry
The love undimmed by space or time;
For thou hast fostered every striving,
To thee we owe
whate'er we do.
So shall thy loyal sons
and daughters
Sing hail, all hail,
Lake View.
—Jeannette Richards '31

Loyalty Song

We're loyal to you, Old Lake View,
Our hats off to you, Old Lake View.
A symbol you stand
For the best in the land,
We're a strong, mighty band,
Old Lake View, Rah! Rah!
You say to us, "It's up to you."
You know, then, just what we will do
We'll know no defeat, no never,
On, boys! we'll win together.
Hurrah for you, Old Lake View!

We're loyal to you, Old Lake View,
Your colors we love, Old Lake View.
The Red and the White
Cheers and thrills at the sight.
For we stand for the right,
Old Lake View, Rah! Rah!
When school days are o'er, Old Lake View
And life's work begun, Old Lake View,
We'll know no defeat, no never.
On boys, we'll win together, through
The memory of you, Old Lake View.
Chu-he-chu-ha—chu-ha-ha-ha.
Chu-he-chu-ha—chu-ha-ha-ha.

Hit 'em high, hit 'em low, Go team Go!
Hail to that dear old flag of Red and White!
Where it unfurls we know we'll win the fight.
For gallant sons and daughters are fighting
for you,
Hearts beating for you, Oskay-Wow-Wow!
We love each nook and turret, great and small;
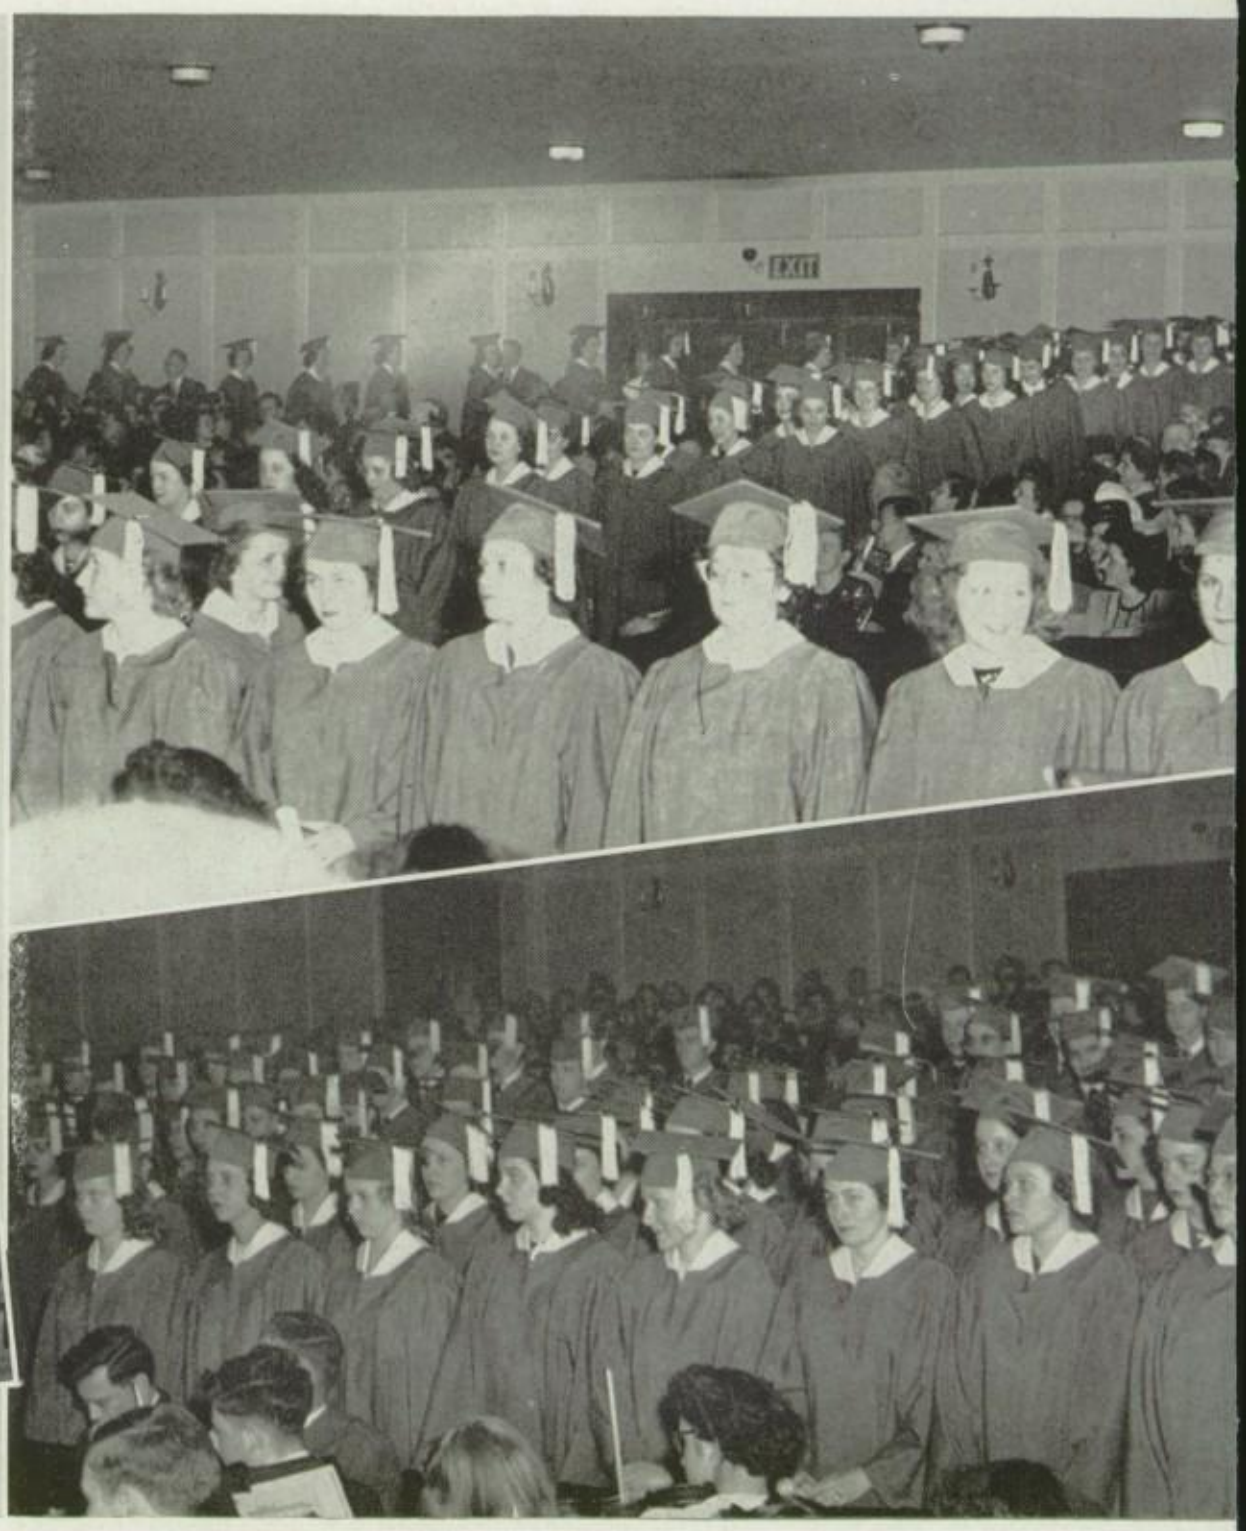
We'll stand by you, though nations totter
and fall;
And we will answer when our country calls
For Loyalty is you, Lake View!

With Anticipation Comes the Realization



The minute hand clicks; the opening chords of "Pomp and Circumstance" begin. The doors are flung back, and you march down the aisle with the rest of your classmates. You dare not turn your head for fear of missing a step, yet you know that somewhere in the audience "Mom" is wiping her eyes, and "Dad" is smiling wistfully, realizing his baby has emerged into adulthood.

The class is seated; and, while you sing the "Lake View Hymn," a lump swells in your throat, and a tear rolls down your cheek. You have looked ahead with anticipation to this night; but, now that it has come, a sadness envelops you. You try to listen attentively to the speeches, but your mind flashes back over the four years. You see yourself as a bewildered freshman trying to find the swimming pool. How you struggled with geometry in your sophomore year! While a junior you burned the midnight oil over chemistry homework, so as to write notes in study period to the crush of the hour. What became of those years?

That Another Milestone Has Been Passed

Time seems to fly, and now you are shaking hands with the principal, the diploma clutched in your hand. You leave the stage almost tripping as you hurry back to your seat. Now comes the recessional, and you realize it is over. When you leave Lake View that night, you glance back for a last look. With the tear not yet dry in your eye and the echo of farewell still ringing in your ear, your mind leaps to wider horizons and new fields to conquer. It is in truth the "Commencement."

We Try Our Best To Serve You Well

The local Honor Society found it advisable during the past semester to find a new title for itself. This was to avoid confusion with the newly-formed chapter of the National Honor Society in our school. Several possibilities were submitted by the members and the name, Hi-Qs, recommended by a Greeley student, Joanne Hoover, was selected by popular acclaim.

One of the most worthwhile activities of the Hi-Qs is the Coaching Club. They, voluntarily, help those students who need coaching in any subject to overcome difficulties, and thus raise the level of scholarship in Lake View.

Faithful Service Long Remembered

MR. EMIL C. ROTHE

"Best wishes"
E. C. Rothe

In 1921 Mr. Brown, then principal of Lake View, asked Mr. Rothe, a graduate of the University of Indiana, to come here as head of the Board of Control and Boys' Physical Education Department. Upon his arrival he undertook the coaching of the Golf and Track Teams, which won many championships. He introduced the Rangers and handled them for about ten years, intensifying the program during the war. In addition he had charge of the Cheerleaders and Gymnastic teams for about fifteen years.

Mr. Rothe said that he had quite a feeling of satisfaction when Mr. Brown asked him to come here because he knew Lake View's tradition, and that he was happy to become a member of our faculty, an association which he has always enjoyed.

It is with deep regret that we see Mr. Rothe leave—a symbol of quiet and sincere integrity which has inspired countless young men to reproduce in themselves the same high ideals for which he stands.

MISS HELEN BRAINERD

Miss Brainerd, a graduate of the University of Iowa, and one of our most popular teachers of mathematics, is retiring this June. Miss Brainerd transferred to our school from Marshall High School in 1918, and since that time has served us in many capacities. Among them were the teaching of mathematics and bookkeeping, the sponsoring of the 3B class, and, from February 1943 to June 1947, taking charge of the Attendance Office.

Of her years at Lake View Miss Brainerd has this to say, "I have been at Lake View thirty-one happy years." To this we like to add, "We have been happy to know you too." As to her future plans Miss Brainerd now desires to take it easy. She is leaving for Kansas City, Missouri, to live with her sister. Our good wishes go along with her.

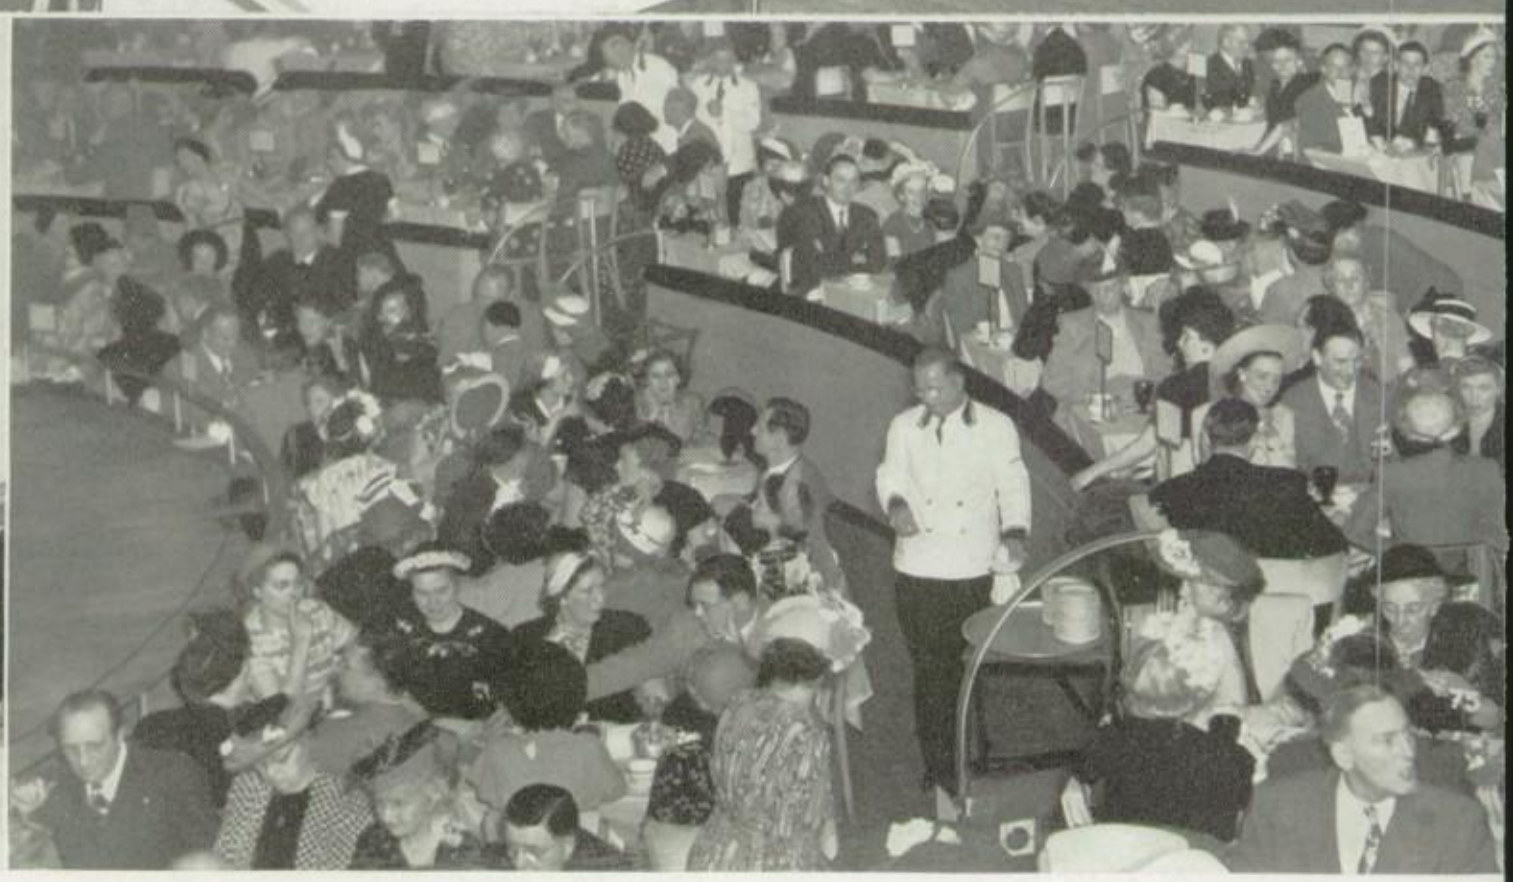
MRS. CAROLINE W. PFINGST

Mrs. Pfingst was graduated from the University of Indiana. She began her teaching career at Lake View in September, 1922. After five years at the Main Building, she was transferred to Greeley where she remained until she resigned in January of this year. Among her many activities at Lake View were the teaching of Latin, co-sponsoring the Lake re View, and sponsoring the S. O. S. Room at Greeley, which she founded. Her helpful understanding of the freshman problems will be greatly missed. Mrs. Pfingst resigned in order to have more time for herself and her home, and we join the rest of the school in wishing her a happy future.

MRS. HESTER STEELE

Mrs. Steele came to us from Waller High School in 1946. She taught Household Arts in the grades as well as in the Junior and Senior High Schools. Last semester she was in charge of the 4B Senior Service where she accomplished excellent results.

Mrs. Steele's husband, a chemist who studied the perfume business in France, makes her perfume. She has an artistic flair to her nature, and demonstrates it by designing her own perfume bottles. She would like to promote a perfume business, but is as yet undecided. Before she resigned Mrs. Steele said, "I like teaching Houshold Arts, but I think it is about time I put it into effect in my own home." We wish you well in your new field of endeavor.



Seventy-Five Years of Springtime

When the birds return, the green buds burst forth, and the gentle breezes lightly begin to turn young men's fancies, Lake View's most momentous occasions always seem to occur. It was in the glorious springtime that she was dedicated; on the first windy puffs of another Spring she was demolished by fire; and it was in that lovely season, also, that her new building was opened over the ruins of the old.

However, it is beginning to appear as if the merry month of May, 1949, is going to be written in the annals of Lake View's memory book as her crowning triumph;—and, if that is so, certainly no day will be able to claim more prominence than Thursday, the twenty-sixth, when the Seventy-fifth Anniversary Banquet was held in the Terrace Casino of the Morrison Hotel.

Climaxed With a Banquet

The entertaining and impressive program was initiated by Mr. G. Dana Henderson, Assistant Principal from 1929 to 1946, who introduced the many illustrious guests. Mr. J. Trimble Boyd, Principal, then welcomed all those present; Mayor Kennelly and Superintendent Hunt followed him with addresses of greeting to Lake View's alumni and friends. The chief address of the evening was given by Bruce K. Brown, son of the late principal, B. Frank Brown.

After Mr. Henderson had read the letters and telegrams of congratulation sent by those unable to attend, the program was turned over to the master of ceremonies, Mr. James Bradley Griffin. Community singing, dancing by the Melva Cordes Dancers, a duet by Mrs. Robert Platt and Mr. Leonard Norman, a reading by Mr. Griffin, the presentation of the May Queen and her Court, songs by Mrs. Gwynfa Thomas Ogilvie, and the presentation of "Adagio" by Alyce Seubert, Ramon Georges, and Herbert Vogel completed the last half of the entertainment. The evening ended on a gay "red and white" note with the audience joining Lake View Band members and majorettes in the Loyalty Song.

When I think of Lake View, as I do every once in a while, I am impressed by the thought of how many of us, of all ages, in all parts of the country, and in all walks of life, got our start there in the old building on Ashland Avenue. I think of how good the teachers were, and how many constructive activities were offered to develop all kinds of talents. I am sure that the same is still true, and that Lake View is still fitting people for the opportunities as well as the problems they will meet.

Robert Palmer
Professor of History
Princeton University

In the winter of 1884, as one of the pupils entered her French class, she exclaimed, "I am tired of school today, Miss Hills (Mrs. Norton). I wish the school would burn, so we could have a vacation."

"Why, why Carrie, that does not sound like you!" she replied.

The same evening, while Professor Nightingale was at dinner, he heard the clang of the fire engine. Professor rushed to the door and called to the passing engine. "Where is the fire?" "Lake View High School." "Take me on board."

While the crowd gathered to watch the fire, Miss Hills told him what Carrie had wished that very morning.

But only half the wish was granted, for on Saturday morning the town paper issued an "Extra," which was sent to the home of every pupil, to inform him that on Monday morning the school would assemble, as usual, only at the little church on School Street west of the Dummy Road School (Nettlehorst).

The first class that graduated from the new building must give thanks for the new school. So the girl who wished that the school would burn, as valedictorian, thanked the town officers, the school trustees and the faculty for the larger, up-to-date building. Nine years later she returned to the school to teach art, and remained there happily until she was fifty-nine years old and had moved to Winnetka.

When she retired she was given a grand dinner with gifts from the teachers and about all the departments, from kitchen embroidered curtains, huge cake, plant, and pictures, to brass sundial and fountain bird-bath. Do you wonder that I am loyal to Old Lake View?!

Caroline Eckstorm

You ask for reminiscences and the influence, however small, they had had in later life.

The influence was very great, especially for those of us who were fortunate enough to have attended Lake View during the tenure of that very distinguished educator, B. Frank Brown. It seems to me that he was as full of enthusiasm for our extra-curricular activities as he was strict in maintaining a high standard of performance for the curriculum itself.

I worked hard for my gold Honor Pin, but I worked harder to be a member of Leader's class, harder to win a place on the Commission, and hardest as editor of the "LAKE reVIEW."

Do you still have these things—and does anyone ever sing "The Last Rose of Summer" which was Mr. Brown's favorite song?

Thank you for your interest in my activities.

Sincerely,

Hope Skillman

It was sixty-seven years ago this June that a lovely, young girl named Angela Phillips stood up to receive her diploma as a graduate of Lake View's "Banner Class" of 1882. It had won the momentous title of "Banner Class" because it had the overwhelming number of SEVENTEEN pupils. Mrs. Angela Phillips Gerrity laughed with her companions, William Sexton and Mary Isabel Reynolds, who were recalling long-treasured memories of Lake View. Mr. Sexton, who graduated in 1893 said in a suddenly quiet tone, "You know, I have many happy years to look back upon, but those four years at Lake View were the happiest of my life!"

Miss Reynolds chimed in then with a merry account of our high school as it was from 1890 to 1894 when she attended it. Every morning the entire school met in the auditorium for a short assembly before classes began. A hymn would be sung, a selection from the scriptures read, and assorted business of the day taken care of, faculty, of course, presiding on the stage. Then the pupils would march sedately to their classrooms; dignified Seniors first, Juniors next, Sophomores behind them, and finally, Miss Reynolds added with a sly smile, "The not so dignified Freshmen." That was the style of the day—order, obedience, and solemnity —but underneath it all the effervescence of youth still bubbled undisturbed.

There were dozens of these stories—times when the faculty numbered four and all the classes could have their lessons in one room; the day one of Lake View's "immortal" teachers, Miss Cochrane, taught the "Lorelei" to her adoring pupils as they tramped across snowy fields from school to home; and the exciting time when the first telephones were introduced into Lake View Township and twenty of the instruments were brought to the school in a demonstration to teach students how to use the strange new invention.

Sleeping dates and dull unfamiliar names bounced into color-filled life as they spoke, and the dim picture of long-ago Lake View was filled with the brightness of people having ideals, dreams, and aspirations very similar to those of youth today; for despite small, material differences, they are alike in more important ways, wanting a good school and beyond that a happy life—things that Lake View has strived to give for seventy-five years.

It would be impossible for me to enumerate the many pleasant memories I have of my four years at Lake View, but I am especially grateful for the experiences I had as art editor of the "Red & White." It was my introduction to all the problems which are part of the business of being an illustrator and painter. In Miss Esther Roeth I found a friend and guide whose help I can never forget. And my associations with other members of the Red & White staff was invaluable. I don't see many of them any more but their influence remains. To me Lake View is not just my "old high school." It is something more; something special; — four very happy, very profitable years.

Sincerely,

Glen Grohe

To All the Gang at Lake View High:

May I join in with all the other grads of L.V.H.S. in wishing you seventy-five more years and in fact, many more besides that of continued successful operation.

My only regret is that my foster children (the characters I created on the Fibber McGee and Molly Show) did not have the opportunity of attending Lake View and cheering for the old Red and White. Even though they didn't go there Nick DePopolous, Horatio K. Boomer, Wallace Wimple, and yes, even the Old Timer, join me in wishing the best to everyone at good old Lake View.

Yours sincerely,

Bill Thompson

When the picturesque new Lake View township school building opened its doors in the spring of 1874, the children of the neighboring elementary schools flocked there as prospective pupils. The thirteen year old Laura Hills timidly joined the group. The first puzzling job for management was to classify us. The Principal, Dr. A. F. Nightingale, and three trustees (my father, John Hills, being one) took their places on the platform before us. In turn they propounded questions and by our answers we were rather arbitrarily divided into three preparatory classes to become in successsive years later, regular high school pupils.

I finished in 1878 and after being graduated from the University of Michigan in 1882, I accepted an offer as teacher at Lake View, and remained there until my resignation with frequent visits to Paris to keep in touch with French, my chosen subject.

The early students at Lake View came mostly from fine old families. A phenomenal number of graduates have won distinguished honors in various important positions. During my lifetime the school has grown amazingly, but has always clung tenaciously to its early high principles and ambitions. Our loyalty continues, and our gratitude never ceases.

Laura Hills Norton

I still—and always shall, remember Lake View with affection. Mrs. Northway taught me not only English, but a love of English—an appreciation of "good" writing; a dislike for "fine" writing. Mr. Sheffield taught Cicero with such vitality that, to this day, the Ciceroean figures of speech influence my own writing.

Mr. Brown, bless his large heart—was a dear to me. Mr. Buck was a grand friend. My work on the Red and White gave me a tremendous interest in writing—and years later, when the Red and White dedicated one issue to me, I was, and am, tremendously proud.

Genevieve Forbes Herrick

Dear Old Lake View High. . . . It was there I discovered I was a ventriloquist and earned my first dishonest money answering roll call for missing classmates.

It was at a Lake View High School student recital where Charlie and I made our first public appearance and Square Deal Brown, our principal, sat in the front row and was the first person to be a victim of Charlie's heckling. I still remember Charlie saying, "I spend so much time in the principal's office they have put a desk in there for me. It's getting so if I go four or five days without Mr. Brown seeing me in his office he looks kinda hurt about it."

That first performance in the Lake View High School auditorium not only encouraged me to go ahead and make a career of ventriloquism with Charlie, but was responsible for me graduating. Miss Angel, my medieval and modern history teacher, had informed me not to be too optimistic about graduating and after my appearance at this recital, she asked me to remain after class the next day. I fully expected her to repeat what she had told me before, only to make it definite this time, but instead she surprised me by saying how proud she was of me and what a great talent I had . . . and, bless her soul, she never called on me the rest of the year, so with no bad marks against me I graduated.

It is unfortunate that we learn too late that our school teachers are the most unselfish people we ever associate with, for all they ask from us is to be allowed to shine in our reflected glory.

Edgar Bergen

I'm not at all sure that my "Inside Lake View will be of any use to you, but I always remember the school with deep admiration and affection, and it certainly played a great and healthy role in my education, such as it is. Did you know that the very first thing I ever had published was an article in the Lake View "Red & White?"

With best regards and thanks,

John Gunther

As we approach the New Year and review the old one let's take a longer look backward and salute a group of people to whom we owe a lot—our teachers.

I don't know how the rest of you feel about your teachers, but as for me, I feel that I am greatly indebted to them. Next to my parents it seems to me that my teachers had more to do with making me the kind of person I am today than anyone else.

Take the faculty at Lake View High School. As I look back on them I would say they must have been, for the most part, as good as many university faculty people. Dr. Peppoon and Mrs. Reynolds in botany and zoology; Sheffield, he of the big bushy eyebrows and a drooping mustache like a desperado. He taught Caesar and made you like it. He taught us Virgil, too. Two more teachers of Latin—yes, we had four years of it, as three years of a foreign language were required, and four years of English.

Misses Angel and Wilkinson; the "Heavenly Twins," we secretly called them. If you didn't know the answer in their classes you had better say so right out. They'd dig the principal parts of an irregular verb out of you if you had it concealed anywhere.

Miss Sheldon in English. A crackerjack of a teacher. She specialized in such things as Burke's Speech on Conciliation. And Hamlet. I can quote today from old Polonius' advice to Laertes. (Go ahead . . . go ahead! So what? That don't fetch you nuttin! Get us a candidate in the 14th Congressional that can win! Hamlet me eye!) And I wrote it on a monthly test paper: "Grapple them to thy soul with whoops of steal!" So help me. We learned the soliloquy, and had to quote from Hamlet's advice to the Players. And they didn't give you the "three guesses" type of test where you guess which is right!

"Grads'" and "Dads'" Night

Bright lights, costumes, and grease paint—yes, Lake View had a taste of the theater for on May 6, 1949, the annual Fathers' Night gave way to "Grads' " and "Dads' " Night. This spectacular production was given to celebrate Lake View's Seventy-fifth Anniversary. It was a musical depicting the highlights of the school's existence. The choice of the site, one of the first commencement exercises, Lake View's first bride, a victory over Lane in football, and the Lake View fire were only a few of the colorful scenes in the show. Mrs. Kimball, an alumna and President of the P.T.A. several years back, continued her ceaseless struggle for a campus.

Once in a Life-Time

Miss Inez Clavijo, class of 1941, and her mother, Madame Noel of the Noel Dance Studio, directed the dance sequences, and Miss Clavijo had a solo number in the picnic scene. Other willing alumni and cooperative students all worked together under the guidance of Miss Kinsella to produce a wonderful night's entertainment. Miss Crowley and Mr. Johnston also contributed their efforts, as well as Miss Sweet, Miss Hutchins and Mr. Watters, to make this affair outstanding in Lake View's anniversary year.

The following students and graduates of Lake View have paid the supreme sacrifice in order that we may preserve our way of life.

To Our Past Friends

In years gone by, as in modern days,

Advertisements helped to make

The Red and White an outstanding Book,

Complete, aware, awake!

At first, the "ads" were very few.

A picture, a rhyme, a line or two.

Friends of the school, merchants nearby,

Contributed much to Lake View High.

B.T.

OUR Advertisers

Advertising plays an important role in every great enterprise, whether it be the manufacturing of automobiles or the selling of lollypops. People have capitalized on this simple fact for hundreds of years. Before the age of printing hand-painted posters were used to advertise different commodities, and, in colonial times, there was no more important person than the town crier, whose booming voice broadcast every important event or bit of news. Today, advertising is one of the most powerful forces in our modern society. Knowing that it can be both a bearer of truth and benefit to all, Lake View High School has never hesitated to incorporate effective advertising into every Red and White Magazine and Annual. The novel idea of having students pose in the "ads" was instituted here in the early thirties by Miss Jessie P. Hastings, and has proved so popular that it has been imitated by many other high schools throughout the country. This fine record has been carried on by Miss Grace King, who makes us believe that honest advertising CAN pave the way toward a better life.

LAKE VIEW HIGH SCHOOL

How Advertising Affects Our Lives

Why is it that we Americans have a much more enriched economy and way of life than any other people of the world? How did we Americans get this high standard of living? First, by mass production; second, because of mass distribution; and third, through mass education leading to demand. Mass education is the function of advertising.

Every day new products and new ideas come into existence. Perhaps you stopped drinking coffee because of its high content of caffeine; but a coffee company markets a product that has little or no caffeine, so you continue deriving pleasure from drinking coffee. How did you learn about this new product? The coffee company must have a way of informing you through advertising.

Advertisers, it is true, put it on thick at times. But, how, without advertising, would you know about the cleaning fluid that removes ink-stains, the hydromatic automobile, and the portable radio? How would you know about thousands of other goods without their being brought to your attention? Yes, some of the advertising is accompanied with a lot of noise and annoying repetition—because everybody isn't always listening.

It is natural for the advertiser to exaggerate to a certain degree about the article which he represents, as it is natural for you, yourself, to exaggerate about one of your own personal possessions when describing it. This "over-exaggerated type" of advertising is misinterpreted by some of the public as "fraudulent advertising." There is a small amount of fraud in advertising; but, isn't there a certain percentage of fraud in human nature? A highly regarded author has written, ". . . there were frauds in advertising; I knew that, just as I knew there were frauds in every other activity in which human beings engage themselves . . . Frauds in advertising? Sure! But only a small percentage . . . the efforts in modern business have gone far to eliminate such tricky deceitfulness altogether from modern advertising . . . "*

Advertising is educational. The advertiser's message must contain some factual information. From such advertisements, the consumer knows what foods contain certain vitamins, which automobiles have safety glass. Another type of educational advertisement is illustrated by the life insurance "ads" which are meant to encourage people to live longer and fuller lives. Advertising spreads facts to the most remote corners of the country. The committees for the prevention of tuberculosis and cancer use advertising as a means for keeping the nation in good health. Politicians use advertising to get votes. Employers advertise for help. Bachelors even advertise for a wife.

Yes, in every one of your daily activities, whether you know it or not, advertising affects your lives.

Joseph Scholtz 4A-9

THE FAMOUS BILLY ROSE SAYS

"There's not much jack for the jack-of-all-trades . . . The pay off is in direct ratio to the amount of know-how in a fellow's head."

In other words, the better you know how to do something well, the better your pay.

How much "know-how" have you got in your head, young High School graduate? What do you know how to do well? Why not take a course in Stenotypy, Comptometry, Accounting or some other subject at Bryant Stratton College and become an expert, a "know-how"? It will pay you off well later on.

CLASS OF '49

In extending best wishes to the graduating class on this, Lake View's 75th Anniversary, we would be amiss were we not to include a tribute to those who have made this anniversary possible, from the founders right through to those who today are responsible for Lake View's activities and accomplishments. It's a job well done!

May the dreams of those who have labored through the years for the school, and thus for the community, be fulfilled, and may Lake View High School continue to grow in its usefulness to those it serves.

Acknowledgments

We, the Literary Staff of the Red and White Seventy-fifth Anniversary Annual, wish to extend our thanks and appreciation to the following for their generous cooperation in the production of this most important year book:

Mr. Lee Atkinson of the Chicago Tribune for his time in taking pictures, and the publicity he gave us in the Chicago Tribune on February 20, 1949.

Mr. Fred Williams of Carson, Pirie, Scott and Company for his generous offer of space in which the pictures for the "Title Page" and "Costumes Through the Years" could be taken, and for the able assistance of his staff in providing the costumes for our boy and girl of the present, for the frame to be used as the background, and other needed accessories.

Mr. E. J. Negri, an alumnus of Lake View, of the New York Costume Company for his courteous response in loaning us the costumes for the "Costumes Through the Years."

Miss Helen Zatterberg, also an alumna of Lake View, for her interest in producing the original data at the Hild Library, a branch of the Chicago Public Library, and permitting us to reproduce this material in photographs for our front section of the Annual.

The Allied Florists for their exquisite donation of flowers for the picture on the "Title Page," and to Mr. L. Clody, an alumnus, in particular, for the charming arrangement of these flowers.

Mr. Roy Solem of the Marshall Studios for his generous contribution of time, and for his most helpful suggestions in the taking of the many pictures for this book.

The Marshall Studios for their kindly aid in completing whatever we asked them to do.

Mr. Leander W. Hagerty, Jr., an alumnus, of Leander Company for his gracious cooperation in all fields in aiding us to plan this book, and his limitless generosity of his time.

The Advertisers for their most generous contributions in order to make this book outstanding.

The Alumni for their helpful ideas and past reminiscences.

Mr. Boyd for his loyal support.

The Faculty for their cooperation, and all-out assistance whenever we have called upon them.
